[From Our Special Correspondent.]

[illegible] Saturday, June 28, 1862.

Army of the Potomac has no longer usual [illegible] of hostility, for the comparative quiet [illegible] month has given place to three days of [illegible] and bloody work as the [illegible] for active movements would depict. [illegible] the result is not yet decided, the result, [illegible] in the bewildering the general plan of operations [illegible] in all that could be desired. We have no [illegible] to report, no long list of trophies to [illegible] and the movements of an army may [illegible] the indications of a reverse, but [illegible] who have been familiar with the position of [illegible] and the plan of operations they contemplate [illegible] are assuming a new and more hopeful [illegible] for an apparent retreat has really brought [illegible] nearer to Richmond than we have [illegible] any time before. A military manoeuvre, [illegible] most difficult of any when performed in [illegible] an enemy, has been successfully accomplished, and, with forces concentrated [illegible] we are prepared to operate more [illegible] than ever against an enemy divided and [illegible] under generals of an imaginary army [illegible] have been compelled to his rule; and if I mistake [illegible] of the times, his joy will be turned [illegible] and that ere many days. It is vain to [illegible] and I may seem over-hopeful in the [illegible] of apparent disaster, but the campaign here at [illegible] consistency to me and Mc[illegible] more completely the master of his [illegible] at any time before.

REBEL PLANS.

[illegible] apparent, after Fair Oaks, that the rebel [illegible] our left wing had induced a change of [illegible] and what the new plan has been I think [illegible]. Up to that time our left wing was [illegible] to be the chief efforts of the [illegible] but with the withdrawal of our [illegible] to the south side of the Chickahominy, the [illegible] with its exposed line of communication with [illegible] the river and White House, has been the [illegible] attack, and though the rebels have apparently been chiefly concerned with efforts against [illegible] wing, there have not been wanting signs and [illegible] that their real purpose was directed against [illegible] unexpected situation must have been [illegible] to them by the bold dash of Stuart's [illegible] movement of last week.

[illegible] the advance of our pickets in front of [illegible] position on Wednesday, the rebels showed [illegible] of a lack of hesitation or ability to oppose any [illegible] which opposed to our advance, and the new [illegible] was gained with far less effort than could be [illegible]. Instead of seeking to drive us from our [illegible] position, as so many expected they would on [illegible], the rebels turned in another direction, and [illegible] large force at Meadow Bridge, one of the [illegible] on the Chickahominy, near Mechanicsville, [illegible] upon our troops in that vicinity in overwhelming force, in an effort to pass around our right [illegible] our line of communication with the [illegible], little thinking that was precisely what we [illegible] them to undertake, if disposed to attack us at [illegible].

POSITION OF OUR FORCES ON THE RIGHT.

[illegible] remaining on that side of the Chickahominy were the corps of Gen. Porter, consisting of [illegible] Division, and the regulars, under Sykes, [illegible] McCall, with which the army has [illegible] reinforced, consisting in all of some [illegible] men, a force entirely inadequate to defend [illegible] between the Chickahominy and the Pa[illegible] against such force as the enemy might bring [illegible] large as could wisely [illegible] of the army.

[illegible] the Division of Gen. Morell [illegible] within about three miles [illegible] to his rear, in the vicinity of Dr. Gaines' mill, was the main Body of [illegible] Porter's troops, consisting of the Brigades of [illegible] Martindale and Butterfield, Sykes' regulars, Fourteenth U. S. Infantry, First U. S. Cavalry, Second U. S. Artillery, Third U. S. Artillery, Twelfth U. S. Infantry, Twelfth U. S. Infantry, Sixth U. S. Infantry, Fifth U. S. Cavalry, Second U. S. Infantry, Eleventh U. S. Infantry, and the Third U. S. [illegible]

[illegible] are indicated on the map which [illegible] this.—Eds. Times.

MOVEMENTS OF THE REBELS.

[illegible] last week, the enemy opposite this position, [illegible] other side of the Chickahominy, have been [illegible], but it has been apparent to those skilled [illegible], that the quietness has been the repose of [illegible] preparing for his spring. Secretly and stealthily the enemy had thrown a bridge across the swamp a short distance below Mechanicsville, nearly opposite the position held by Gen. McCall, so hidden by the trees and undergrowth along the Chickahominy that its existence was not suspected until an adventurous scouting party came upon it a few nights since.

Across this bridge the rebels had thrown up a series of intrenchments on the commanding heights beyond, under the cover of which they attempted on Monday, the 23d inst., to throw two new bridges across the stream, in which effort they met with a determined opposition from our forces, and a heavy thunder-storm coming on that night, compelled them to desist the work they had striven to continue under cover of the darkness. These symptoms of an attack revealing the purpose of the enemy, Gen. McCall was directed to withdraw a mile down the road to a strong position on Beaver Dam Creek.

[This creek, though not named on the map, will be found just to the east of Mechanicsville, at the point indicated as the position of McCall's Division.—Eds. Times.]

This was to be the line of battle in case of an attack, and further opposition to the rebels attempting to cross was stopped, as, for strategic reasons, it was desired that they should effect a passage.

THE FIGHT COMMENCED.

On Thursday they came, taking advantage apparently of our occupation, with the movement of the day previous on the left. Crossing the river in strong force, under cover of a heavy fire from their batteries on the opposite side, the enemy pressed down the road against the position of Gen. McCall, first attacking his First Brigade, consisting of the Bucktails, and the Fifth, Eighth, Ninth and Tenth Pennsylvania Regiments. These troops were soon reinforced by the six regiments forming the other two brigades of the division, and from their strong position behind the swampy ravine of Beaver Dam Creek, held the greatly superior force of the enemy at bay from the time of attack until the going down of the sun, at near 9 o'clock.

THE TROOPS FIRST ASSAILED.

The troops first assailed were the Pennsylvania Bucktails, who were doing picket duty and were so unfortunate as to leave two of their companies surrounded, and one of them, Company K, is made prisoners—the Captain of the Company—Capt. Irvine, escaping to tell the story. From their rifle-pits and earth-works McCall'S brave men held the advancing rebels in check for near four hours, when they were reinforced by the brigades of Porter's Corps, and the fight continued three hours longer, the rebels being repulsed with heavy loss, our troops under the protection of earth-works suffering less. The loss of this day's fight being summed up at some 200.

OUR MEN RETIRE BEFORE THE ENEMY.

That night an order came from Gen. McClellan for Gen. Porter to withdraw his forces gradually to a point near Meadow's Bridge. After a few hours' sleep upon their arms, our troops were aroused, and, in accordance with the plan of operations, Gen. McCall, at 3 o'clock, opened a fire of artillery on the enemy who vigorously responded, until our forces began gradually to retire before them as if retreating, but maintaining their ranks in good order, crossing a bridge over a creek on the way, destroying it behind them, compelling the enemy to wait the slow construction of a new passage-way in the fire of our opposing artillery and heavy musketry fire from the Ninth Massachusetts.

Retiring here, our troops continue their retreat over two separate roads, burning behind them such Commissary stores as they could not carry, which, fortunately, was of small account, as the removal of all portable property across the Chickahominy had previously been ordered. Following close after Porter's men, the rebels continued to advance, until they came upon a piece of woods, in which they seemed to hesitate to follow, halting for some time before showing themselves again. But, without waiting for them, our troops still fell back, until near the Chickahominy, at Woodbury's Bridge, where they halted in the open country, which there spreads out into broad fields and fertile pastures.

HEIGHT OF THE ENGAGEMENT.

Quickly the dispositions for battle were made, the division being drawn up in line of battle, the batteries planted in the most eligible positions, and every preparation for holding the ground at any cost, in accordance with the orders received from the Commander-in-Chief. It was now near noon, and our troops had taken fresh courage for effort from the hour or two for rest and refreshment which they had enjoyed. Then the enemy were reported to be again advancing; they opened fire on our men from the woods skirting the plain in which the latter were posted.

First commencing with the usual picket skirmishing, and then swelling into the roar of the artillery duel, the struggle opened between the advanced guard of the two armies, until by 3 or 4 o'clock in the afternoon the battle raged fiercely all along the lines, until within an hour or two of sunset, when the storm lulled for a time, and then the rebels, who had been meanwhile reinforced, came on with fresh vigor to the assault. They were soon met with equal determination by Porter's men, aided now by the reinforcements that had come to them from the corps of Franklin, Sumner and Keyes; from the former Slocum's Division, from Sumner the Brigades of French, and the Irish boys under Meagher, and from the further reserved corps of Keyes, the Brigade of Palmer, which had done good service in the fight of Wednesday on the left. Desperately and determinedly did the rebels press forward, but as desperately and determinedly were they met and driven, gaining nothing further that night of the promise of their morning advance. Not until after 9 o'clock did the men find rest, which, we may be sure, came not unwelcomed to such of the men as had passed through the struggle, commencing early in the afternoon of the previous day.

Most opportunely was the arrival of the reinforcements that evening, for our troops, hard pressed by superior numbers, were in danger of being driven further back than was intended, and the first symptoms of disorder were showing themselves in the hasty flight of teamsters and lookers-on, the straggling soldiers in the crowd being turned back from Woodbury's Bridge by the strong guard who kept watch over it with their bayonets.

AFTER THE BATTLE.

And so the sun went down upon that battle-field strewn with the bruised and mangled forms of what have once been men, of what were still men, though shorn of their full proportions, and hidden to go maimed and halting through life. But though the night had settled down upon the earth, and wearied men were sleeping so peacefully, even in the midst of death, rest did not come to all, for there was still a vigilant watch to be kept upon the movements of the enemy, and the near-by work of removing the dead, and providing for the wounded. And early in the morning, at 2 o'clock, all were disturbed by the sound of sharp firing coming from the direction of the left, where the enemy were amusing themselves with a night on the positions of Sumner, Hooker and Kearney, with no result that I learn of. Sumner's Division, directly opposite Woodbury's Bridge, on the further side of the Chickahominy, were also attacked during the day of Friday, by brave Vermont boys and the Thirty-third New-York, with the help of Ayer' and other batteries, repulsing the assault with great slaughter.

THE LOSS.

And who can estimate our loss, when none but an Omnipotent eye can, in the confusion of the first hours that follow the engagement, search out the fate of all who appear not with their comrades as they gather with their regiments at night? It will surely exceed a thousand, and I hope not pass the 1,500; but a few days more will tell, while, meanwhile, the list must swell greatly, for the battle is not yet fully ended. Strategy or no strategy, there must still be desperate fighting, even though the rebels should play into our hands to the end, as they are reported to have done to-day in seeking to possess themselves of the communications with White House, little thinking, probably, how far advanced were the preparations for changing to a new and better base on the James River, where our gunboats can afford us full protection, and we shall have but a single flank to guard.

TROOPS ENGAGED.

THE OPERATIONS OF THURSDAY.

FROM ANOTHER CORRESPONDENT.

Headqrs' Hdqrs. Friday, June 27, 1862.

The army of the Potomac is having a week of work, and the opinion of the prevailing signs is that the closing [illegible] of the last week in June is to witness hard fighting. Yesterday afternoon, at about 2 o'clock, the rebels came and crossed the Chickahominy at Meadow Bridge, two miles below Mechanicsville, attacked with artillery from across the river, and with a strong infantry force, the regiments composing the First Brigade of McCall's Division—the Bucktails, the Tenth, Eighth, Ninth and Fifth Pennsylvania Regiments. They were promptly met by the Pennsylvanians, who fought them for two hours, when the Second and Third Brigades of McCall's Division, comprising six regiments, reinforced their hard-pressed comrades, and fought them until evening, repulsing them at every point. Our men suffered a very considerable loss in killed, wounded and prisoners, something like three hundred—the figure is merely estimated—but were ready for further work this morning and in high spirits. The Bucktails were especially unfortunate. Two companies of them were surrounded by the enemy. One of them succeeded in escaping, but the other, Company K, fell into the clutches of the Confederates. The Captain of the company, Capt. Irvine, after he had been taken, took advantage of a temporary confusion and made good his escape. First Lieut. Weber, of the same company, was left in the hands of the rebels. After holding the enemy in check for four hours, McCall's Division was reinforced by two brigades from Gen. Fitz John Porter, and the rebels were again driven back, they making a further attack, with a heavy loss. During the action a severe cannonading was kept up by both parties, the rebels, however, failing to do much damage with their shells. They advanced upon us in great force. It is estimated that at least 30,000 men were brought by them into the fight, to make a desperate effort to flank our right. Our far inferior force, however, held them effectually in check and eventually drove them back.

Gen. McClellan himself arrived on the ground toward evening, and immediately sent a dispatch to be read to the troops on the other side of the Chickahominy, to the effect that Gen. McCall had repulsed the enemy and driven them back upon their entrenchments. The dispatch was read to the troops just at dusk, and from that hour till late in the night, all along the lines of our army, cheer after cheer went up.

The fight was renewed early in the morning, when the enemy were again repulsed: but at about 6 o'clock, in accordance with strategic plans of Gen. McClellan, our troops fell back two or three miles, the rebels following.

The fight has proceeded to-day on better ground and satisfactorily. The movements of the army are important, but I am forbid to state them in detail.

From White House we hear of a probable advance of the enemy on that post of supplies, and everything there is ready to receive them.

All along the lines to-day there has been vigorous firing, the enemy attempting to shell our camps.

ANOTHER ACCOUNT.

(Correspondence of the Baltimore American.)

White House, Saturday, June 28, 1862.

The events transpiring at this point, and in the army before Richmond, during the past four days, have been of such varied character and thrilling interest, that I scarcely know where to commence or end the record in order to make it understandable to the general reader. Many who were eye-witnesses to these movements have fled off panic stricken, fully convinced that the whole army before Richmond has been destroyed, and that Gen. McClellan has been out-witted, out-generaled, outflanked, and "driven to the wall," where he promised to place the enemy. The evacuation of White House was to them an inexplicable mystery under any other condition of affairs; but had they have kept their eyes open early in the week, they would have discovered that the work of evacuation was already and surely progressing before any of the fighting on the right wing, as early as Tuesday, and that large numbers of vessels had left the York and Pamunkey rivers, and were moving rapidly around to a new basis of operations on the James River. They might also have observed that all civilians were forbidden to approach the front as early as Tuesday, under any pretence whatever, and that the immense stores of supplies at Dispatch Station had been steadily reduced for a week, until the last box of crackers, barrel of beef and bale of hay had disappeared before the great contest on Friday, which lost the way open for the enemy to approach that point, which I have every reason to believe was designedly intended by Gen. McClellan to be the mouth of the empty trap into which they were being led, and, as I hope and believe, to their entire rout and discomfiture.

Before proceeding to the narrative of events as they have occurred in the vicinity of White House during the past few days, I will briefly state that the whole movement of Gen. McClellan, so far as the changing of his base are concerned, and in reality the making of his left wing his right wing, and withdrawing his right wing to rest near Savage Station, on the railroad bridge across the Chickahominy, has been accomplished, throwing his way open for the enemy, to rush to his assistance at least at White House, where he found nothing but an empty platform. Whether this movement is good or bad, or what may be intended by Gen. McClellan to be accomplished by it further than throwing his left on to James River, and supporting a land attack on Fort Darling, it is impossible at present to say. A day or an hour may decide this point. I will merely proceed to a narrative of events as they occurred at White House up to Saturday, at noon, embracing such statements as reached me from the battle-field on Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

WEDNESDAY AT THE WHITE HOUSE.

At the White House, on Wednesday, matters were progressing as usual, with the exception that there had been a check in the landing of stores of all descriptions, while those on the landings were being rapidly loaded in wagons and moved off toward the left flank. Several steamers with large cargoes of vessels laden with forage and subsistence had also been started down the river with orders to proceed to City Point on the James River. This reversal in the course of transportation occasioned considerable comment and speculation, but was accounted for by the fulfillment of an order direct from Gen. McClellan. Some supposed it to be occasioned by the supply of a portion of Gen. Sumner's army, which rumor said it had reached the James River to co-operate with him. An order was also received from headquarters early on Wednesday to prohibit any one from coming forward to the lines on any consideration whatever, unless the parties belonged to the army. This order was so peremptory that even those connected with the Press, some of whom had come down to forward their reports by the mail-boat were prevented from returning, and others who had managed themselves through were severely cut back.

On the same day Gen. Casey came down and took command of the small land force, and of assuming the [illegible] and in the evening was notified to prepare at any moment for the entire evacuation of the post, and the preservation, as far as practicable, of the public property. Similar orders were also sent to Commodore Lowrey. He immediately communicated with the fleet, and a division of men armed with axes proceeded during the night to cut down the trees around White House, and subsequently all the way down above and below the Pamunkey Bridge, so as to give them free play for the use of their guns. On the same evening we had a report from headquarters that a division of the rebels, the forces of "Stonewall" Jackson and Gen. Ewell, were approaching, and threatening to open the way by the right flank for a raid on the White House. In the meantime the trains on the railroad were kept running night and day, carrying forward nothing but ammunition and munitions of war, with stage and locker trains, and sick prisoners.

The down train of cars, due at 5 o'clock on Wednesday evening, had not arrived, which added to the excitement among the sutlers and camp followers. At half-past 10 o'clock in the evening, however, the train arrived bringing down about ninety wounded men, it having been delayed for their accommodation. They were adarly all of Gen. Hooker's Division, and had participated in the gallant advance on the left centre on Wednesday morning, driving the

UNITED STATES OF COLOMBIA.

A Truce between the Military and Civil Authorities—Probable Results—Reception of the Troops—Miscellaneous.

From Our Own Correspondent.

PANAMA, Saturday, June 21, 1862.

A tacit truce has been brought about between the Federal Military and State Civil authorities, both parties waiting for the movements of the superior authorities of Bogota. In the meantime, Col. SARRAGOSSA's two hundred and fifty men have marched into Panama and occupied the spacious Chiriqui Barracks. Col. S. immediately issued an order, in which he professes to have come to Panama on a peaceful mission, and in which he explains the objectionable phase he was instructed from the National Secretary of War, by protesting that it only means he shall enforce such decrees of the General Government as he may be called upon by the Governor to enforce.

On the part of the State Government, a convocation of the principal officers was held on the 16th inst., and a "declaration" issued, signed by all the chiefs of departments. The question of issue is recounted in this paper, and the reasons reasserted why the occupation of the State by National troops is objected to. The conclusion reached, however, is that the Government consents to the temporary occupation; "but if, as is not to be expected, these forces, now or in the future, should attempt to enforce the decrees and orders alluded to in the instructions of the Secretary of War to Col. SARRAGOSSA, the Governor will resign his place, so that he may in no manner authorize the violation of the rights of the State; and he makes this declaration in the presence of the authorities of the State, that they may have due notice of a resolution of such transcendent importance. And the functionaries present feeling it to be their duty, in case such attempt should be made, that they should also resign their places, unanimously declare their intention to do so." This resolution has been communicated officially to the Provisional President of the Republic, and to the Consuls in Panama and Aspinwall. The two schooners that brought the troops from Cartagena to Aspinwall, have sailed for the former place, and reports are rife that they will bring reinforcements.

The troops were well received by the people, with few exceptions, and the negroes were in ecstacies at their arrival. Last Sunday evening, the fine brass band by which they are accompanied attracted a large crowd of all classes on the "Battery," which is our public promenade, to hear morceaux, well given, too, from "La Favorita," "Don Pasquale," "La Norma," &c., and the Yankees were smoothed down with "Hail Columbia" and "Yankee Doodle."

Bishop VASQUEZ, who, in common with all the prelates of this Republic, has a mortal hatred for Mosquera, decamped for the interior a day or two before the military occupation. I believe MOSQUERA has laughed nearly all the Bishops for opposing his mortmain law, and had given our Bishop warning not to meddle with or oppose his decrees. The Cathedral of Panama is, therefore, closed, much to the chagrin of the lovely señoritas who were accustomed to show off their black tresses and feathery gauzes in the temple, at grand mass.

Last night a detachment of [illegible] went down to Aspinwall, to watch the [illegible] goods from a British brig, which [illegible] arms and munitions on board [illegible] Gazes. One of the Panama papers [illegible] that Señor FORNO, Secretary to Gen. HERRAN, New-Granadian Minister to Washington, was about to send arms to the Isthmus, for standestine transportation to Chiriqui; but I do not credit the report, as I doubt whether Gen. HERRAN or Señor FORNO care to take any active part to prolong the present troubles of the country.

The British brig Geico arrived at Aspinwall on the 19th, with twenty-seven passengers for California nearly half of whom were marriageable young women of very robust appearance—at least they appeared so to us thin-visaged folks. Two British ships from England, and one from France, have also arrived at Aspinwall this week.

Capt. D. B. SIMPSON, Esq., Special United States Inspector of Customs for the Isthmus, and WILLIAM PARKER, Esq., Superintendent of the railroad, go home to-day on the Northern Light on short visits.

The United States steam-frigate Saranac, and Her Britannic Majesty's war-steamer Termagant and Mutine, are in port. The latter, which has been ashore on the Mexican coast, will go to San Francisco for repairs. She was engaged in honorable trade for a time—of smuggling specie of from the Mexican ports, to save export duties, when she met with the accident. She brought three or four hundred thousand dollars to Panama for England. The United States brig Perry is at Aspinwall. No British war vessel there, unless one may have arrived to-day.

CENTRAL AMERICA.

Civil Strife in Guatemala and Honduras—Celebration of Coffee in Salvador—The Nicaragua Route of California—From Costa Rica.

From Our Own Correspondent.

PANAMA, Sunday, June 22, 1862.

The Panama Railroad Company's steamship Guatemala from Central American ports, reached Panama late last night. She brings dates from Guatemala to the 12th, Salvador to the 13th, Nicaragua to the 15th and Costa Rica to 18th June. The news is not of importance.

GUATEMALA AND HONDURAS.

This Republic is quiet. The excitement in the city of Guatemala, growing out of the late attempt to blow up the Government powder magazine had subsided. Considerable fear was felt that the entire crop of cochineal for the present season would be lost, in consequence of bad weather—but the Noticias now estimates that it will amount to 6,000 zeroons.

Honduras was quiet under the rule of the Vice-President. Congress was in session.

SALVADOR.

The cultivation of coffee is rapidly increasing in this State, and it is expected soon that the crop will be equally rich with that of Costa Rica.

The Pope of Rome has admitted that the President of Salvador is right in his claim that the clergy shall take the oath to obey the laws of Salvador—a question that has caused much trouble in Salvador the past year.

NICARAGUA.

The Company which proposes to be about to open the Nicaragua route in California has repaired the old steamer Virgin, long ago sunk in Lake Nicaragua, repaired her, and put the boiler of the steamer John Hart in her, which latter vessel was wrecked on the lake, near Granada, last December. The Virgin is now in running order. Some repairs have been made on the transit road between Virgin Bay and San Juan del Sur. Advertisements appeared for mules, &c., to transport passengers. In fact, everything seems to be going on just as if the Company was in earnest, which nobody believes it is. The old transit shanties run out in a few months, unless something is done to make a show of renewing the rents, and it is probable this splurge is only intended to keep it alive, in the hope that "something may turn up."

Some expectation of a revolution, growing out of the claims of rival persons for the Presidency, seems to exist, judging from the tone of the papers.

COSTA RICA.

Congress has been in session since the first of May, but has done very little, save to amnesty political exiles and prisoners. The old CAPTT grant for building a road from the Capital to the headwaters of the Serapiqui River on the Atlantic, has been annulled, or, rather, had not been opposed, and the new Belgian Company's contract had been ratified. This road, if ever it is built, is intended to direct most of the trade of Costa Rica, that now passes over the Isthmus, to San Juan del Norte, on the Atlantic—but it is doubtful, with a costly road to pay toll over, shallow rivers, and a bad and unfrequented port at the end of the route, will bring the advantages that are expected from it.

Mr. RIDDLE, United States Minister to Costa Rica, has made a postal treaty with that State.

The Secretary of Foreign Affairs in Costa Rica, in his annual report speaks strongly in favor of the efforts of the United States Government to put down the Southern rebellion.

"Expulsion of Jefferson Davis from Ulio Hall."

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

I notice an article under the above title in your issue of Thursday, 26th inst. As a graduate of the Hall, present at the meeting when the "Report" referred to was said to have been adopted unanimously, I have a right to request that you publish the following correct statement of the matter:

JEFFERSON DAVIS was not expelled from Ulio Hall. He never was a member of Ulio Hall. His name was on both catalogues. But it was proved to the satisfaction of the meeting that he had been elected an honorary member of Whig Hall nearly three years before the same honor was conferred upon him by Ulio.

Our laws prohibit any "Whig" becoming a member of our Society. And it was for this sole reason—expressly so stated by the Alumni meeting—that his name was ordered to be left out of our catalogue in future—it never having had any right to be in the catalogue.

For the truth of the above statement, I refer you to Prof. DUFFIELD and G. M. GIBBS, D. D., members of Ulio Hall and of the Faculty of Princeton College.

TOWNSTOWN, Md.

Explanation from Mr. Ashael Abbott.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

In your Sunday's issue I find an article purporting to be a report of a certain suit instituted by me against the American Society for Meliorating the Condition of the Jews, wherein it is said, "the complaint setting forth that in 1857 SYM GROSVENOR left a legacy to the Society of $10,000, which the parties now representing the Association had undertaken to use in accordance with the wishes of the testator." The humor of this canard is rich, and would be amusing were it not that it sets my very able attorneys in a rather ridiculous light; for surely no sound lawyer would mingle such a circumstance in his drawing up of a complaint. The giving of that legacy has been the innocent occasion of a usurpation of the offices of the Society by a set of men that used to denounce it as "dead and buried and ——" With these I have been litigating under orders from the legitimate officers, in order to save the funds from being squandered, and have been thus far successful. I have them all locked up by a judgment, to which the trifling one I obtained last week is merely subsidiary. Yours truly,

ISRAEL ABBOTT.

Fourth of July Celebration at Bridgeport, Conn.

The citizens of Bridgeport, Conn., intend to celebrate the Fourth of July in a manner unequaled in Western Connecticut. Great preparations have been made for a grand military and firemen's procession, and for other appropriate methods of celebrating the day. Gov. BUCKINGHAM and Staff are to be present, and will review the military. The Bridgeport Battery of Flying Artillery—a splendid corps—will exhibit some target practice with solid shot and shell. Engine Company No. 28, of this City, with Dodworth's Band, visits Bridgeport on that day.

The ladies of the different churches have united for the purpose of holding a grand festival for the benefit of sick and wounded soldiers. It will be held in two large halls, and visitors to Bridgeport on that day will find accommodations for a splendid dinner, and by procuring it at the festival, will contribute toward the funds of a most useful and worthy society. Excursion trains will be run on the New-York and New-Haven roads, and steamers from this City [illegible] Bridgeport.

Care of the Wounded Troops.

We understand that Gov. MORGAN has presented to Dr. Thos. T. [illegible], of this City, a testimonial in writing of his approbation of Dr. E's services rendered to the wounded of the battle of Fair Oaks, while he was in charge at White House, Va.

THE SOLDIERS' HOSPITAL AT NEWARK.—A correspondent of the NEW-YORK TIMES has a communication upon the subject of the Government Hospital in this city, which, while evidently desiring to give due credit to all concerned in its establishment and subsequent operations, falls into a surprising number of errors. It should be understood that the hospital here is a Government institution, and subject in precisely the same regulations as all other Government hospitals. The location of the hospital here, and the fitting it up for patients, is for a great measure due to the efforts of Mayor L. WARD, who, but so far from his being a salaried official, as stated in the communication referred to, he has given his time and labors without the thought of remuneration. Our citizens will smile at the idea of Mr. WARD being a salaried official, well knowing that from the very commencement of the war, his time and services have been given freely to the soldiers and the cause of the Union. —Newark Mercury.

VETO MESSAGE FROM HIS HONOR THE MAYOR.

The following veto was received from his Honor the Mayor vetoing the resolution giving permission to James Nesbitt to keep a paper stand on Nassau-street; also to Thomas O'Connor to keep a stand in front of Number sixty-five Cedar-street:

MAYOR'S OFFICE, NEW-YORK, June 27, 1862.

To the Honorable the Board of Aldermen:

GENTLEMEN: I must return unapproved the two accompanying resolutions, one giving permission "to James Nesbitt to keep a paper stand on Nassau-street, near the main entrance to the Post-office," and another giving permission "to Thomas O'Connor to keep a stand in front of sixty-five Cedar-street," which is also on the Post-office sidewalk.

I regard it as a proper rule, and one which I believe has been generally observed, that permits for stands on the sidewalks should not be granted without the consent of the occupant of the building in front of which the stand is proposed to be placed. In these cases, the United States Government is the occupant, through its Postmaster, from whom I have received an earnest protest against such grants. The service of the Post-office Department is, I believe, seriously impeded by the erection of these stands, and the public will prove to be unpopular.

While awaiting an expected conference with the Postmaster on this subject, I inadvertently omitted to act upon a resolution adopted by your body on the fifth instant, giving permission to Johnson and Monaghan for a stand on the Post-office sidewalk, which I intended to have returned unapproved.

GEORGE OPDYKE, Mayor.

Which was received, laid on the table and directed to be printed at length in the minutes, and published in all newspapers employed by the Corporation.

LOCAL INTELLIGENCE.

Board of Aldermen.

MORE DESIRABLE PARK MONUMENT—A NEW VOTE HAS BEEN GIVEN AND AN OLD ONE OVERTURNED—A NEW MARKET SECURED—A TREE FROM SOUTHAMPTON WINES—APPROPRIATION OF $8,000 TO CELEBRATE THE FOURTH OF JULY.

At the regular meeting of this Board, yesterday, Alderman Fagan offered resolutions authorizing the Street Commissioner to fit up Mt. St. Vincent Asylum, on the Central Park, as a hospital, and that the Park Commissioners be requested to hand over the same to the State Military Authorities, for hospital purposes, and also accepting the offer of the Sisters of Charity to take charge of the same. The resolutions were laid over.

The Mayor transmitted a vote (see official report) of the resolution of the Board, permitting paper-stands to be erected on the sidewalk opposite the Post-office.

On motion of Alderman Boots, the Board took up the Mayor's veto of the resolution of the Board making the Staats Zeitung a Corporation paper. The veto having been read, Alderman Isaacsmith moved that the resolution be passed, notwithstanding the veto.

Alderman Barnes doubted if there was any gentleman who was prepared to answer the unanswerable arguments of the Mayor against the resolution. The Corporation printing already amounted to upward of $100,000, and there was no reason why this expenditure should be increased. It would only be considered as a donation to the Staats Zeitung.

Alderman Jeremiah replied that there was an absolute need of having the official proceedings of the Common Council advertised in a language that could be read by the large German population of the City.

Alderman Greene said that he was in favor of, and had voted for, making the Staats Zeitung a Corporation paper, but there were statements in the Mayor's veto which deserved consideration. It was true, as stated by the Mayor, that the expense of Corporation advertising was already too large; but this large sum should be reduced by dropping some of the papers which now print the proceedings, and which were utterly useless as advertising mediums.

After some additional remarks from Alderman Dayton, a vote was taken, and the resolution passed over the veto by a vote of 13 to 4.

Alderman Orthwell called up the report of the Committee on Markets, in favor of building a new market at the foot of Eighteenth-street, East River, and asked leave to offer as a substitute for the report, resolutions in favor of throwing the ground open to the free use of market wagons from the country, and authorizing the Street Commissioner to prepare the ground for the purpose.

Alderman Greene raised a point of order against the adoption of the resolutions as a substitute for the report, on the ground that the ground proposed to be thrown open was almost within a stone's throw of the new Tompkins Market, which had cost the City a large sum, and was nearly useless, and if another market were to be opened in the quarter of the City it ought to be as high up as Twelfth-street.

On motion of Alderman Feeney, an amendment was adopted limiting the expenditure in preparing the ground to $5,000.

The question was then submitted for the adoption of the report, and it was adopted.

While the vote on the adoption was being taken, a great commotion took place in the outward to the Hall, caused by the presence of some twenty or thirty anxious wives, who, it appears, had failed to get their portion of the money appropriated to them, and had come in a body to the Aldermen for relief. After considerable loud talking, and some chivalrous action on the part of the women, they were ejected from the lobby, and the Board, having taken up Alderman Boots's called up the resolutions of the other Board, appropriating $8,000 for the celebration of the 4th of July. Alderman Fagan moved to strike out $8,000 and insert $5,000. Lost. A vote was then taken on the resolutions, which resulted in Ayes 11, Noes 6. Alderman Farley, who occupied the Chair at the time, declared the resolutions carried by a constitutional vote, on the ground that there was an annual appropriation, which included the expense of the 4th of July celebration. [Laughter.] Alderman Greene appealed from the decision, and the Chair was sustained by the same vote as above. The Chair then announced the following gentlemen as a Committee to act with the Committee of the other Board in carrying out the resolution: Aldermen Boots, Mitchell, Allen, Orthwell, Wilde. The Board adjourned to Thursday next, at 4 P. M.

Board of Councilmen.

MORE DESIRABLE PAVEMENT—NEW BADGES FOR THE BOARD OF ENGINEERS OF THE FIRE DEPARTMENT.

The Board of Councilmen held their regular session, yesterday, but there was little transacted out of the regular routine order of business. Resolutions to pave Division, Hester, Broome, Delancy, Rivington and East Thirty-seventh streets, with Belgian pavement, were laid over under the rules. An invitation to witness an exhibition of the pupils of the Military Academy of New-Hamburgh, in the City Hall Park, was accepted. A resolution was adopted authorizing the purchase of badges for the Board of Engineers and the Fire Department. Resolutions to connect the Fire Telegraph with various Engine and Hose houses, was referred to the appropriate Committee. The usual annual donation of $1,000 was made to the Fire Department. An application of C. Lane, for permission to exempt the Spring-street line of stages from payment of licenses, was approvingly referred. The remainder of the business was entirely routine, and the calendar was nearly cleared of "general orders." The Board adjourned to next Monday.

The audience testified their appreciation by enthusiastic applause, evincing in that, as in other portions of the exercises, they have reason to be proud of Mount Washington Institute.

GENERAL CITY NEWS.

The Fareinchase of a Purchase.—In the Court of General Sessions yesterday, Mr. James Wilcox, a gentleman said to be widely known (to the police,) was brought up on a bench warrant. It appeared that Wilcox recently entered a clothing store and ordered a vest, saying he'd call for it at the time. After he left the place it was ascertained that the bill given was a counterfeit, (a $10 on the Atlantic Bank.) Wilcox was arrested and taken to the Jefferson Market Police Court, and committed for trial, he never having called for his vest, which it appeared he ordered to be ready on a certain day, which had passed. His counsel now contended that there was no sufficient evidence to convict him, and that he should be discharged. The Assistant District-Attorney thought that although there was no evidence that the prisoner was aware that the bill was a counterfeit when he passed it, still his not calling for his vest, was a circumstance strongly tending to show guilt. The Recorder decided that the evidence did not warrant the commitment, and discharged the prisoner.

Arrest of Three Fugitive Boys.—Officer Murray, of the Twenty-sixth Precinct, yesterday afternoon took into custody three boys, named Eugene Chavez, Edward F. Emmons and Geo. F. Grisser, who are alleged to be fugitives from justice. Eugene Chavez is charged with having, a few days since, stolen a large amount of money from his stepfather, who resides on Dorchester Heights, near the City of Boston. The boy who took the money also stole a large quantity of powder, a rifled carbine, and two or three revolvers, and, with his two companions above named, took passage from Boston on Saturday night. They were all arrested upon their arrival in this City on the Fall River boat yesterday, and are detained at Police Headquarters until a requisition from the Governor of Massachusetts shall have been received, directing them to be sent back to Boston for trial. The accused are young boys, not over fifteen years of age, and appear like youngsters who have enjoyed the advantages of education and refined society.

The Police and the Liquor-dealers.—About 70 warrants were issued yesterday from the Essex Market Police Court, for the arrest of parties who are alleged to be guilty of selling liquor without licenses. The largest proportion of these delinquent liquor-sellers belong in the Tenth, Thirteenth and Fourteenth Wards. By virtue of the order recently issued by Mr. Superintendent Kennedy, the patrolmen of each Precinct are required to make complaint against every person who is found actually engaged in selling strong and spirituous liquors without a license, and yesterday the officers throughout the City began their laborious duties in pursuance of this order.

Badges for Police Justices.—The Police Justices of this City have been presented by the authorities with very elegant gold badges. They are tastily conceived, and are executed with much care and skill. Upon the lower part of the badge, the City Arms are neatly displayed, encircled by a Roman chased laurel wreath. Above the arms is a plain gold plate, with the name of the wearer, and the words "Police Justice," inscribed.

Gen. Fremont.—Gen. Fremont, who with his family lent his residence in West Nineteenth-street, is looking remarkably well, and though temporarily fatigued by his Shenandoah trip, was compelled to give audience to scores of his fellow-citizens, who called upon him yesterday. He is now waiting for orders from the War Department.

A Fatal Accident.—Francis Wilson, a hod carrier, was accidentally killed yesterday, while at work on the new bank building, on the corner of Fulton and Pearl streets, by some bricks which fell upon his head. Coroner Naurath held an inquest upon his body. The deceased was a native of Ireland, aged about 25 years.

For Key West.—We are informed that the steamship Marion will touch at Key West on her way to New-Orleans, for the purpose of landing mails and passengers.

Notes of Prize Decisions.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT.

Before Judge Betts.

BLOCKADE—MISSTATEMENTS IN LOG—EVIDENCE.

The United States vs. The Schooner J. W. Wilder and Cargo.—This vessel was captured by the R. R. Cuyler, on Jan. 20, 1862, off Mobile Point. The vessel was taken for the use of the Government, having been appraised at $3,250, and her cargo was sent to this port and libeled as prize. An appearance was put in for the vessel and cargo, but no answer was put in and the case was heard by default. On proof that the master and crew of the vessel ran her ashore at the time of capture and abandoned her, so that no witness from the vessel could be produced before the Prize Commissioners, the Court on motion ordered the prize master who was present at the capture, to be examined as a witness on the interrogatories in preparatoria.

The evidence of this witness was, that the vessel was seen off Mobile, apparently trying to enter it; that when the Cuyler approached, the schooner endeavored to escape, and was abandoned by her crew, who, from the shore, fired upon the boats which took possession of her. No complete log was found on the vessel; but four paper-books were found, purporting to give accounts of voyages, supposed to be of this vessel. The last one was headed "Schooner Avozeta, from Havana towards Matamoras, Francisco Capella, Master." The first date in it was Jan. 15, and the entries come on the 17th. A letter was found on board addressed inside to Capt. Capella, and on the outside to "Capt. de la Wilder, Mobile." The letter was in Spanish, and related to a passenger for the voyage. There was also a telegram found on board, dated Mobile, Dec. 2, 1861, addressed to Capt. Capella, schooner Wilder, signed by a party to whose order and risk a quantity of cigars on board were, or a bill of lading found on board, dated Jan. 9, made deliverable in Mobile. Another bill of lading, dated Jan. 14, 1862, was for two casks of soda shipped on the schooner called the Adriata, Capella, Master, for Matamoras, consigned to Capella.

Held by the Court—That, on the evidence, the vessel was destined to Mobile, and was, when arrested, endeavoring to enter that port.

That there is no evidence that she was a neutral vessel; while the proof is clear that the cigars were enemy property, being shipped at the risk of enemy owners in Mobile.

That the papers were false and delusive in that her log states her voyage to be toward Matamoros, whereas her course was hundreds of miles wide of that route, and in naming her the Avozeta, which is falsified by the letters and papers found on board.

Vessel and cargo accordingly forfeited as prize.

The United States vs. The Schooner Flash and Her Cargo.—This vessel was captured by the bark Restless on May 8, 1862, about fourteen miles north of Charleston. She was chased for five hours at sea, running into an inlet of the port of Charleston, and not being able to escape, was run ashore, set on fire and abandoned by her crew, whereupon the boats of the Restless took possession of her. On proof that none of her crew could be obtained, the prize-master was ordered to be examined as a witness in the cause. He was so examined. Before the proceedings were closed, the master, mate and one of the crew, having been sent into this port by a United States vessel, were produced as witnesses and examined.

The papers showed that the vessel was of American build, but was registered in Nassau, N. P., in British owners. The shipping agreement was dated April 16, 1862, for a voyage from Nassau to New-York and back. The clearance of the ship and cargo was made at Nassau, on April 19. The documentary proofs thus framed evinced an honest voyage from a neutral port to one of our own, with a lawful cargo in a legal trade.

But the testimony of the prize master showed that the vessel was attempting to enter the port of Charleston, that she altered her course inward when close, that she was fired at, and then run ashore and abandoned by her crew, who took with them all her papers but the log-book.

The master and mate of the vessel also testified that the vessel was bound into Charleston, if she could get in; otherwise, to New-York, and had got inside of the blockading squadron before she was run ashore. The master knew and supposed the owners knew of the blockade. The seaman testified that he supposed that the voyage was to New-York, according to the shipping agreement.

Held by the Court, That on the evidence the voyage was undertaken and prosecuted with intention on the part of the owners and master to violate the blockade of Charleston.

Vessel and cargo therefore forfeited as prize.

The United States vs. The Schooner Olive and Cargo—This vessel was captured by the New-London in November, 1861, in Mississippi Sound, off Biloxi. She was loaded with lumber, and was directing her course toward the Mississippi Passes. The papers found on board of her showed that she was enrolled and licensed at Pensacola under the authority of the Confederate States, and owned by residents of Florida, thus being enemy property.

Both vessel and cargo were appraised—vessel at $700, and the cargo at $1,650, and taken for the use of the United States.

The libel in this case was filed May 10, 1862. The Alleged Eviction—Deprived of Light and Air.

SUPREME COURT—CIRCUIT.

Before Judge Barnard.

Lawrence Kester vs. Charles Hoffman.—This was an action to recover damages in consequence of plaintiff's having been evicted, as alleged, from a house and lot, situated at the corner of Second-avenue and Thirty-third-street, which he had hired from the defendant for one year from the 1st May, 1860, at the yearly rent of $600.

It was alleged in the complaint that a portion of the lot, 51x24, in the rear of the house, was used as a yard for the accommodation of the plaintiff and his tenants; that on the 14th May, 1862, the defendant evicted the plaintiff from nearly the whole of the premises, used as a yard, by laying the foundation walls of two houses, which shut out both light and air, and deprived plaintiff and his tenants of the use and enjoyment of the yard and wood-sheds, which were used by his tenants.

An injunction was granted by Justice Leonard during the erection of the buildings, but was afterwards dissolved, and the buildings completed.

The defence is that the whole plot of ground, 100x80, has always been divided into four lots—two fronting on Second-avenue, and two on Thirty-third-street.

That two houses, each of which the plaintiff owns, had already been erected on the lots facing Second-avenue, the yards of which extended to the rear of the lot fronting on Thirty-third-street, of all of which the plaintiff had notice; and that the houses referred to in the complaint were erected on the lots fronting on Thirty-third-street, no part of which were included in the plaintiff's lease.

From the evidence in the case, which is rather conflicting, it appears that the plaintiff's tenants left him from time to time in consequence of inconvenience arising from want of light and air.

Case still on.

Kimball and Underhill for plaintiff; McNeill and Swain for defendant.

The Enlistment of Minors—The Oath of the Recruit at the Time of Enlistment Conclusive as to the Age.

COMMON PLEAS—SPECIAL TERM.

Before Judge Daly.

Matter of Patrick Fallis—The petitioner enlisted in the army, swearing that he was 21 years of age. His friends being desirous to have him discharged now obtained a writ of habeas corpus for that purpose, alleging infancy. Lieut. Childs (on behalf of the Government) made return to the writ, setting forth that by the act of Feb. 12, 1862, it was lawful to enlist a minor between the ages of 18 and 21, and that the oath of the recruit was conclusive as to his age.

The Court so held, and discharged the writ, returning the recruit, who is said to be 19 years of age, to the service of his country in the field.

J. M. Sheehan for petitioner.

MONDAY, June 30—P. M.

The Weekly Averages of the Banks of the City of New-York, on Saturday, June 28, 1862, present in the aggregate the following changes from the previous exhibit of June 21:

Increase in Loans	$1,506,639
Decrease in Specie	215,319
Increase in Circulation	97,161
Increase in Undrawn Deposits	1,189,389

Including the Clearing-house operations of the week, which show the inter-exchanges between the Banks, and including also the Sub-Treasury average of the week, the following is the general comparison with the previous exhibit, and also with the movement this time last season:

	June 28, 1862.	June 21, 1862.	June 21, 1861.
Capital	$60,207,000	$60,051,000	$60,051,000
Loans	112,408,012	110,901,373	140,836,722
Specie	42,876,611	43,091,930	31,047,840
Circulation	2,128,559	2,031,398	3,649,183
Gross Deposits	107,601,055	103,875,752	104,874,631
Exchanges	12,876,903	25,775,074	25,009,999
Undrawn	93,721,752	127,990,705	120,564,428
In Sub-Treasury	6,686,383	14,906,279	14,906,354

The Bank return shows a remarkably steady average on the Specie line. The difference through the month of June is scarcely a half million of dollars, while nearly ten millions of Bullion has been shipped abroad. As anticipated, the Loan and Deposit lines are up over a million of dollars each. The Money market to-day is generally firm at 6 ⅌ cent. on call, on miscellaneous collateral, and 5 ⅌ cent on United States Stocks and Notes. There is no increase in the offering of prime Merchant paper, which is in demand at 5 ⅌ cent. The Gold and Exchange markets have been unsettled by the War news and rumors from Philadelphia. The price of gold rapidly returned to 109¼@109½ ⅌ cent., and Bills on London to 120½@121 ⅌ cent. On the Continent the rates are as follows:

Paris—60 days' sight ⅌ dollar	4f. 67½c.
Paris—3 days' sight ⅌ dollar	4f. 65c.
Amsterdam—60 days' sight ⅌ guilder	40⅞c.
Hamburg—60 days' sight ⅌ marc banco	40⅞c.
Frankfort—60 days' sight ⅌ florin	40c.
Bremen—60 days' sight ⅌ rix dollar	77½c.

The Stock Exchange is considerably agitated by the War news to-day. The interpretation of the advices was generally unfavorable [illegible] known. At the early Board the decline from Saturday's sales was ¼@1 ⅌ cent. on the list round, and 1¼@2 ⅌ cent. at the Second Board, beginning with United States 6 ⅌ cents, and so on down to the Western Roads. The chief speculative sales for the fall were made in New-York Central, as being the controlling influence on the Share list. The opening price was 93⅞, as against 95¾ on Saturday afternoon. The lowest sales of the day, 91½ ⅌ cent.; the closing quotation, 92¼@¾ ⅌ cent. Of the National 6 ⅌ cents, the sales were unimportant—the quotation of 105¼@½ being nominal at the close. The Treasury 7.30 ⅌ cents, were sold down to 104¼ and interest. On the printed list of sales at the Second Board the lowest prices of the day were made. After the adjournment the market was ¼ ⅌ cent. better, and at 4½ o'clock the prices left off steady and rather improved, about as follows:

N. Y. Central	92¾	Panama	128⅞
E. 10	26¼	Pacific	116
Erie Preferred	63⅞	Missouri	50⅞
Rock Island	68¼	Tennessee	57⅞

NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE REBELLION.

The close of the past week was marked by important events before Richmond, prominent among which was a battle, or rather a series of battles, continuing through two days. The fight of last evening, however, was only incident to more important matters, which will be found detailed in our columns this morning. Gen. McClellan has contracted his lines, and massed his troops between the Chickahominy and James Rivers—the latter of which will constitute his base of operations until the fall of the rebel Capital, which cannot apparently be long delayed. White House has been abandoned, and the right wing of the army has been drawn in across the Chickahominy—not without considerable loss of life, but still slight, it is believed, in comparison with that of the enemy. The supplies for the army will hereafter be conveyed up the James River, under the protection of our gunboats. On Friday morning the enemy made the looked-for attempt to turn our right wing. The rebel division of Gen. Jackson, which must have started for Richmond immediately after the fiasco in Shenandoah Valley, attacked Gen. McCall's Division of the Pennsylvania reserves, on our extreme right. The action lasted for three hours, and was brilliantly successful on our part. Jackson was repulsed and severely punished. The rebels then made a general attack on our right wing, which was composed of Gen. Fitz John Porter's army corps. A severe battle ensued, in which the rebels suffered severely. In the midst of this battle Gen. McClellan executed the movement for which he had been preparing. His whole right wing commenced an orderly retreat, falling back until it had crossed to the south side of the Chickahominy, in the rear of his left wing, and pushed on toward the James River. The movement was carried out in excellent style, everything valuable being secured, and the rebels repulsed in their attacks upon our rear guard. The evacuation of the White House was completed on Saturday, all that was valuable being carried away, and the remnants not worth moving burned. In this destruction the White House itself shared, some unauthorized persons having set fire to it in the confusion. Our troops there were finally put on board steamers and taken to Yorktown.

A City Point correspondent of the Philadelphia Press writes under date of June 27: "Our gunboats made a daring reconnoissance last night with boats and launches, for the purpose of experimenting with a new description of naval machinery, and for other purposes, but for the sake of the Government interests I am not permitted to publish particulars."

A cavalry reconnoissance was, yesterday morning, made up the valley of the Shenandoah to Luray, which established the fact that the enemy were not there in any considerable force. Our cavalry had a skirmish with a party of rebel cavalry, with unimportant results.

We have important intelligence from the Mississippi River, which leads to the belief that Vicksburgh, the last stopping-place of the rebels in that region, will soon be in our possession, if it is not already so. Our Upper Mississippi Flotilla has passed the mouth of the Yazoo River, and attained a point four miles above the city, and communication has been had overland with Commodore Farragut's fleet. On Saturday morning last Capt. Davis started down the river from Memphis, on board the gunboat Benton, and was to be followed immediately by other boats. It is announced by the rebels that Lovell has been superseded in his command at Vicksburgh by Van Dorn, who expresses the determination to defend the place to the last.

The steamship Blackstone arrived at this port last night, from New-Orleans on the 21st ult.—the date of our last previous advices. She brings intelligence that the French bark Cephese, from Marseilles via Vera Cruz, with a cargo of brandy and wine, and $60,000 in specie, had been seized in the Mississippi and sent North for adjudication. The Blackstone brings a cargo of cotton, sugar, etc.

The United States steam transport Matanzas, Capt. Lizzard, from Port Royal, in 2 days and 18 hours, arrived at this port last night. She brings 75 passengers and a mail. There was nothing now transpiring at Port Royal or vicinity. No military movements having been made since the repulse on James Island. It was understood in the Department, we learn from our special correspondent, that our position on the island was to be abandoned—it being useless to hold it without reinforcements, which were not looked for before the Fall.

CONGRESS.

In the Senate yesterday, a bill to punish persons giving or offering to give members of Congress or officers of the Government any consideration for procuring contracts, office or place, was referred to the Judiciary Committee. The resolution providing that a list of contracts made by the Departments shall be published weekly, was passed. The bill providing that vessels recaptured from the rebels shall be returned to their original owners without salvage, was passed. The bill granting a pension to the widow of Gen. C. F. Smith was passed. The bill prescribing an additional oath of office was passed. The bill to establish certain National Arsenals was passed. After some further unimportant business, the Senate went into Executive Session, and then adjourned.

In the House, consideration of the article in the Tribune in regard to "the Intelligencer job," was transferred from the Judiciary Committee to a special Committee. The bill providing for the construction of a ship canal from Lake Michigan to the Mississippi was then considered until the adjournment. Mr. Ely, of New-York, made a speech in advocacy of the proposed amendment providing for the enlargement of the Erie and Oswego Canals and locks.

GENERAL NEWS.

It is announced, just as we are going to press, that the steamship City of Baltimore, from Liverpool on the 16th ult., via Queenstown on the 19th, is coming up the Bay. Her advices are four days later than those received by the Arabia.

By the arrival at this port of the steamship Northern Light, from Aspinwall on the 21st ult., we receive later advices from the United States of Colombia and from the Central American States. Affairs at Panama had settled down into a State of quietude, the authorities waiting for intelligence from Bogota before taking any further action. Meantime, the troops of Mosquera had crossed from Aspinwall to Panama, and had been well received. The details of affairs in the Central American States, contained in our correspondence, present no feature worthy of special mention. The Northern Light brought the mails, passengers and treasure—about $400,000—from California.

The prize schooner Sarah, which was captured by the United States steamer Keystone State off Charleston, in an attempt to run the blockade, arrived at Philadelphia on Saturday. She has 137 bales of cotton on board, and is altogether a valuable prize. The prize schooner Catalena, which was captured off Charleston by the United States steamer Alabama, arrived at the same port on Sunday, in charge of Prize-master Price. This vessel is like one of our small-sized yachts, being only of twenty-three tons burden. She has on board 32 bales of cotton.

Gen. Schuyler Hamilton, of Branford, Conn., recently in command of a division of the army of the West, has resigned on account of ill health. He was a member of Gen. Scott's Staff during the Mexican war, and has proved himself a superior soldier.

Mrs. Elvina Ellery, wife of the late Col. Ellery, died in Philadelphia on Saturday last, in the 46th year of her age. Her death was the result of grief and over-exhaustion in nursing her husband, whom she was tending at the time of his decease.

The Board of Aldermen yesterday passed, over the veto of the Mayor, the resolution making the Staats Zeitung a Corporation paper. The Street Commissioner was directed to prepare the ground at the foot of Sixteenth-street, East River, for an open market. The resolutions of the Councilmen in favor of a joint Committee of the two Boards to conduct the celebration of the Fourth of July, and appropriating $8,000 therefor, were adopted, and Aldermen Boole, Mitchell, Allen, Ottiwell and Walsh were appointed on said Committee.

In the Court of Common Pleas at Special Term, yesterday, Judge Daly decided that under the Act of February, 1862, in relation to the enlistment of minors, the oath of the recruit at the time of enlistment was conclusive as to age, and that in such cases the Court would not interfere, it appearing that (although the recruit was a minor) at the time of enlistment he made oath that he was twenty-one years of age.

The war news of yesterday morning was unfavorably construed on the Stock Exchange, and prices gave way 1½@2 ⅌ cent. on the Share and 1@1½ ⅌ cent. on Government Bonds, the market ultimately closing quiet at the decline. Gold and Bills on London advanced ¼@1 ⅌ cent. from the lowest rates of Saturday. Gold left off 100½@100¾.

Business was somewhat checked yesterday by the discussion of the exciting war news. Less activity was discernible in Breadstuffs, prices of which generally favored buyers. No important movements were reported in Cotton. Provisions were in moderate request, as were also the principal kinds of Groceries, Metals, Laths, Tallow and Tobacco. A fair demand prevailed for Hay, Hops and Whisky, the latter article at drooping rates. The freight engagements were less extensive.

The Live Stock Markets are crowded with animals this week. In addition to 4,350 figured up on the books at Allerton's up to 3 P. M. yesterday, a delayed train on the New-Jersey Central Railroad threw some 400 more into the yards just at night, so that the whole City supply will probably be near 5,000 beeves for the week. They sold pretty well for a while Monday morning, but when it was noised about that there were over 4,000 cattle, butchers were no longer in haste to make purchases. Prices fell off near ½c. ⅌ lb., with indications of a further decline to-day. Sheep are in excess of all wants, and lower.

The City Yesterday—New-York Under the War-Surge.—The feeling in the City yesterday revived the old experiences of the Sumter and Bull Run epochs. Like then, the atmosphere yesterday fairly pulsated with human emotion. If there were such a thing as an instrument that would gauge public feeling as the barometer does the atmosphere, it had surely have shown far up in the blood-heat and high-fever ranges. Everything conspired to enlist the deepest feelings of the New-York public. It was known that at last the mighty stake was being played. But beyond the fact that a bloody battle had been fought during Thursday and Friday of last week, everything was shrouded in obscurity. Only the clash of arms reached our ears; only an occasional glimpse of the combatants seen through the uprolled smoke-curtain was caught. Was it victory or was it defeat? What had Saturday and Sunday brought forth? Of course, the data at hand were variously interpreted according as the knowledge or the predilections of men inclined them. Radicals and Secessionists both united in being well pleased; both saw in it the utter defeat of Gen. McClellan, and both were as jubilant as they dared to be. For the rest, while there were a plenty of timid souls, there were not wanting those of insight enough to read the reports as indications of a capital success, and who had both the knowledge and the sagacity to see that amid these operations Gen. McClellan had effected a strategic coup that must assuredly result in the capture of the rebel Capital. Thus the tide of opinion and sentiment, hope and fear, surged and swelled through all the day. We can have few more such experiences, and it is, perhaps, just as well that we should not, for such intense exaltations are sure to bring their own penalty. While they last, however, such spectacles are certainly sublime, and nothing could have been more so than that of yesterday in New-York.

Junction of the Fleets on the Mississippi from Above and Below Vicksburgh.—The news that our ramboats from Memphis have effected a junction with our gunboats and mortar fleet from New-Orleans, at Vicksburgh, and that the fleet, some twenty craft strong, was about to open upon the enemy's works, indicates a speedy fall of the contumacious town which is now the only impediment to the free navigation of the Mississippi River. The assault was to begin on Friday last; and it is not unlikely that the town may by this time have fallen. Still we would not be surprised if the Vicksburgh rebels were able to make quite a lengthened stand against our fleet. Their heavy guns are planted on the high bluffs, and at commanding positions, where it is quite difficult work for the guns of our gunboats to reach them, or for the mortars of our bombketches to strike them; and we have no land force sufficient to attack the town in the rear. The telegraph says that the rebel force there is estimated at twelve thousand men, which is much more likely to be true than most of the other stories that have come to us from the Southwest of the large rebel bodies massed at various points. The rebel army at Corinth had direct railroad communication with Vicksburgh, and we know that a considerable body of rebels went southward from Grand Junction on the Mississippi Central Railroad. Their object now is simply to delay and annoy us as much as possible, and also to defend the State Capital. This is petty work, compared with the great things that were to be done by Beauregard's Army of the Southwest; but then it is all that the rebels in that region are now capable of doing. They will be deprived of even this trifling pleasure before long.

Our Army Before Richmond—Successful Movement of Gen. McClellan.

Our advices from the Army of the Potomac are comparatively meagre. But they show conclusively that Gen. McClellan has executed with complete success, though with heavy loss, a most important and difficult military manœuvre,—one which gives him a much safer line of communication, which assures the cooperation of the gunboats on James River and of Gen. Burnside beyond it, and which compels the rebels to evacuate Richmond or find their retreat hopelessly cut off. He has carried his whole force across the Chickahominy, and made that prolonged and most defensible swamp the bulwark of his right wing and rear,—while he holds the James River on his left, giving him a perfect communication with his supplies, and access by water to the City of Richmond. We shall undoubtedly hear very soon that the gunboats have not only gone up the James, but that they have also opened communication with McClellan on the Chickahominy.

It is already known that only part of our army had previously crossed the Chickahominy. Porter's Division and McCall's Brigade remained on the right bank of that stream to guard our line of communication, and prevent a flanking movement on our right, which they have at last accomplished. McCall's detachment had sufficient to perform both sides of that stream, while by attempting to do so he lost the whole advantage of it as a defensive line. His front was very extended, and at points consequently comparatively weak,—while he was compelled to advance upon Richmond by the most difficult of its approaches. For some time past he has been strengthening his position in front, on the left, by earthworks,—a proceeding which has not been generally understood, but which is now fully explained, as it renders him perfectly secure from attack in that direction, while he moves forward along the James River towards the rebel Capital.

Great alarm was created in the City, yesterday, by the exciting reports of the defeat of our army which were put into active circulation by some of our cotemporaries. It was represented that the rebels in overwhelming force had attacked and destroyed our right wing,—that they had seized the White House, cut off our communications, destroyed the Railroad and Telegraph, and were passing round to the rear of our army, while Gen. Lee was crushing it on the left in front. These were simply the random reports of the first runaways, who knew nothing of the general plans of McClellan, and who supposed the whole army ruined because they saw regiments falling back. It is in the highest degree unjust and cruel to give such rumors general currency, and especially to put upon them the dismal constructions prompted by ignorance and panic. It is now very well understood that the White House was abandoned by our forces, in advance of the battle, by direct orders of McClellan,—that all the sick and wounded were safely removed,—that all the stores, supplies, forage, etc., etc., which had been accumulated there, were embarked on transports, and were on their way to the James River, via Fortress Monroe, under convoy of the gunboats, long before the rebels showed themselves at all in that vicinity,—and that Gen. McClellan has simply handed over to the rebels an empty and sickly post, which has done him good service, but for which he had no further use.

So far as we can judge from his previous movements, Gen. McClellan had hoped to be able to effect this change of front without a battle. But in this he was disappointed. Deceived by his movements into the belief that our right wing had been neglected, the enemy made a sharp attack upon it; and though it fell back, in pursuance of orders, they were still able to force it into a battle which has involved very serious loss. How severe that loss will prove to have been, we cannot yet tell. But we have reason to believe that it cannot have been as heavy for us as for the rebels, and that our force is thus, in comparison with theirs, stronger than it was before the battle. Of this, however, we shall know more hereafter. One thing is very clear:—if McClellan had been defeated, he would be retreating towards Williamsburgh and Yorktown. On the contrary, he is concentrating his force behind the Chickahominy, and movements are already in progress at Fortress Monroe, West Point, Washington and New-York to send him supplies by the James River. This does not look as if he had been so badly crippled as to detract substantially from the success of his movement.

With the Chickahominy in his rear, McClellan may bid defiance to any attempt of the rebels to outflank him. That swamp can only be crossed by the bridges which he commands; and every one of them can be so held by artillery as to render transit utterly impossible. Why the rebels should have originally abandoned so splendid a line of defence, seems inexplicable. They could easily have held it against the whole army, and compelled us to approach Richmond from some other direction. They have now given us the full benefit of its strength. Resting upon that, McClellan's right wing and rear are perfectly safe. With his left resting on James River, his front strongly fortified by redoubts and earthworks, a powerful train of mortars and heavy siege guns on the spot and ready for operation, he can easily reduce Fort Darling, remove all obstructions from James River, push our gunboats directly into Richmond, repel any force that may attempt a rescue, and thus bring the campaign to a brilliant and successful close. How rapidly he may be able to do all this is a matter of secondary importance. That he will do it, and that his recent change of front gives him the means of doing it with absolute certainty, we think there can be no room to doubt.

Push Forward Reinforcements!

Now that the crisis of the great rebellion has come, it behooves the people as well as the Government to see to it that the General upon whose shoulders has fallen the mighty work of destroying it utterly, be not left short of the forces needed to this end. It will not do to render the result in any way uncertain for want of men while hundreds of thousands can be had. It will not do to prolong the war by permitting the occurrence of alternate instances of victory and defeat, defeat and victory, when it is possible to inflict upon the rebels a defeat after which no victory shall ever come to crown their arms or to sustain their spirits. We have now, practically speaking, the whole Confederate force centred at one point—near the rebel Capital. The small detachments in the Cotton States at Charleston and elsewhere, are of little account in the general issue. The capture of [illegible] and of the rebels rest. To this work now must be addressed the energies of the nation; for its speedy accomplishment must the tremendous military power of the North be directed, and steadily directed, until the work is finally and forever completed.

Men are now called for throughout the North for this work. It was announced a week or two ago, that fifty thousand additional volunteers were needed at once. Under present circumstances, a week ought to be sufficient to put them in the field, and to establish them at points where they can render effective service. Neither the fighting men nor the fight-ing patriotism of the country is exhausted. All that the people need is to understand distinctly that fifty or a hundred thousand more soldiers are needed to crush out the rebellion and sustain the glory of the flag, and they will step forth with alacrity. Volunteers are wanted—so says the Government; so announce the newly-opened recruiting offices. If other parts of the country are laggard, let the whole of the new muster be assigned to New-York.

Some of the other forces in the field will probably now also be sent to support Gen. McClellan and to operate upon the rebel last ditch. In the official order appointing Gen. Pope to the supreme command of the three columns under Gens. McDowell, Fremont and Banks, it was expressly said that the purpose was that he might "operate against Richmond." Now that the great adversary of the three Generals just named, Stonewall Jackson has left the scene of his late exploits, and joined his forces to the rebels at Richmond, there will be nothing to detain Gen. Pope's troops for any length of time in the Shenandoah Valley or on the Rappahannock. It may be considered assured that Pope himself will not delay; and it would give him a new claim on the applause of the country, and the Commander-in-Chief a new claim to military sagacity, if we should learn by telegraph that the work assigned him was already under way. Gen. Burnside also.—It has not been given out where his fine column is just now, but it has been universally understood for some time that he was actively preparing to cooperate with Gen. McClellan. There are other troops at the National Capital and elsewhere who could be spared, or at least who can be spared as soon as new volunteers step forward to take their places; and those who understand the situation thoroughly, and have authority in the premises, will doubtless now see to it that they are all quickly concentrated in front of the enemy.

Let the reinforcements, the volunteers from the people and the spare regiments and columns from every quarter, be now sent as speedily as possible to sustain McClellan in his last great effort—that so he may be enabled to crush at one blow the head of the rebel monster, and give the distracted country peace.

Gov. Stanly and his Traducers.—We have received the following communication from Mr. Vincent Colyer, which we publish with very great pleasure:

Newbern, Tuesday, June 24, 1862.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

In accordance with the request of His Excellency, Gov. Stanly, I wish it published that I misunderstood His Excellency. That he had no intention to close my schools for colored people in Newbern; that he never intended to enforce the laws of North Carolina, and that his interference with my schools was simply to prevent a collision between the military authorities and the citizens, and that he has done Gov. Stanly a great deal of harm, as well as very great injustice, by his misunderstanding. We took occasion, when his misstatements of Gov. Stanly's action first came before the public, to protest against the savage terms in which some of our neighbors saw fit to denounce that gentleman, and to say, from what we knew of his past history and of his personal character, that he was not in the least likely to pursue a course at once so unjust and impolitic as that ascribed to him by Mr. Colyer. We are glad to find our statements on this point fully borne out by Mr. Colyer himself.

Is Lager-Bier "Beer?"—Judge McCunn, who is authority on "Beverages," says it is not; and Judge Barnard echoes his decision. Are they not good judges? "The Assistant District-Attorney agreed with Judge Barnard in his interpretation of the statute," we are told, and "all the other Judges of the Supreme Court" are asserted to "coincide with Judges McCunn and Barnard." Threats of suits for false imprisonment against Superintendent Kennedy and the police officers are uttered in open Court, and injunctions have been applied for to restrain arrests for violating the "Beer" clause of the Concert Saloon act.

This virtuous indignation has about as slender ground as the legal dictum that eliminates it. It would need as many Judges as there were Bishops at the late Convocation at Rome to unsettle the import of a word in daily use, and defined by lexicographers with unmistakable clearness. The provision of law which has set Courts and Bars into such a ferment, is this: "It shall not be lawful to sell or furnish any wine, beer, or strong or spirituous liquors to any person" in a theatre, concert saloon, etc. The Judges rule that lager-bier is not "beer," and so may be sold or furnished without violating the act. The dictionaries or encyclopedias say it is "beer," just as "porter," "brown stout," "pale ale," or any other malted liquor is "beer," or as "hock," "claret" or "Madiera" is wine. The terms employed in the statute are obviously generic, and cover whatever kinds of "beer" or "wine" may be concocted for market.

A glance at lexicography will settle this question beyond cavil, besides furnishing some light as to the properties of the Teutonic beverage which addles the District-Attorney's office and the Courts.

Webster has "Beer—A liquid made of malt and hops."

Webster: "Beer—A fermented liquor made from any farinaceous grain. Beer is of different degrees of strength, and is denominated ale, porter, brown stout, &c., according to its strength, or other peculiar qualities."

American Encyclopædia: "Beer—A fermented liquor made from various grains."

[illegible] barrels is laid before being used, and bier, beer." A kind of beer much used in Germany, where it is kept in casks on a frame (lager) placed in a cellar for the purpose, before it is considered fit for use;—the name of a similar beverage now largely manufactured in the United States."

American Encyclopædia: "Lager-beer is beer that has been stored some months in vaults. * * The free use of it should be condemned, from the tendency to produce apoplexy and palsy."

These citations would seem to settle the usus loquendi, and to warrant the impression that when the Legislature say "Beer," they mean the several malt liquors, with whatsoever prefix, generally classed under this well-known term. There cannot be a doubt, we think, that the higher courts, to which this question will of course be carried, will accept this view and overrule McCunn and Barnard in their singular judgment. We have nothing to do, in this discussion, with the wisdom of the prohibition of lager-bier in places of public amusement, by legislative enactments; our concern is simply with the fact, which is as unquestionable as language can make it.

Mysterious Disappearance of Capt. Lizzard.

We regret to learn that Capt. Lizzard, so long connected with the steamer Arago, and most widely known as among the oldest and most popular Captains connected with the commerce of this port, has disappeared recently, under circumstances which render it almost certain that he is no longer living.

Capt. Lizzard has been in ill health for some time, and left his active command some months ago. He left this City on the 12th of June, and went to Niagara Falls on a journey of pleasure and recreation, and stopped at the International Hotel, where he arrived on the 14th. On the next day, Sunday, he was seen to come out from the dining-room, at about 5 o'clock, since which time, over a fortnight since, no tidings whatever can be obtained of him. His baggage, &c., remained in his room undisturbed.

It is supposed that he must have walked out along toward the Falls, and that under some sudden attack of vertigo, to which he had occasionally been subject, he fell into the stream, and was carried over the cataract.

Capt. Lizzard was somewhat over 60 years of age, was never married, and leaves a large fortune. He was a most amiable and excellent gentleman, and one of the most popular commanders out of this port. An active search has been prosecuted for some of him, but thus far without success.

Arrival of the Prize Steamship Cornelius, of London.

This British steamship was captured May 4, twenty miles east of Havana, by the U. S. gunboat Sagadoc, and taken into Key West, where she was condemned by the Admiralty Court, and was sent to this port to be sold. She was formerly employed in the line between this port and Galway. She has a cargo of wines and brandies valued at half a million of dollars. She sailed from Key West on the 23d June, and Port Royal on the 27th, having taken on board at Key West Gen. Hunter and Staff, and landed them at Port Royal. Passed, while going in to Port Royal, the U. S. gunboat Quaker City, from Key West.

Left at Key West, U. S. ships San Jacinto, Flag-officer Lardner; Rhode Island, Commander Trenchard; Sagamore, Commander Drake; National Guard, Capt. Hall; bark Amanda, Capt. Goodwin, and schooner Wanderer, Capt. Brown. Passed, going into Key West, British prize schooner Will o' the Wisp, of Lunenberg, N. S. The C. did not communicate with the land at Port Royal, and has no news from there.

The Ninetieth New-York Volunteers and Forty-seventh Pennsylvania were at Key West, and in good health.

Affairs in Alexandria.

Alexandria, Monday, June 30.

Capt. McMillen, of Co. E, Fourth Ohio regiment, fell overboard yesterday, and before assistance could be extended, he was drowned.

The hospitals in this City are full of sick and wounded soldiers, numbering altogether some 1,800. The buildings are kept clean and well ventilated, and the patients receive the best care and attention. Yesterday, citizens from nearly every loyal State visited these hospitals, and were escorted through the cleanest rooms of each building, evidently pleased with the arrangements. Although no State, excepting Ohio, has contributed anything for their benefit, the ship placed here want for nothing, which money can procure.

NEWS FROM WASHINGTON.

Debate in the House on the Question of Enlarging the Canals.

GEN. McDOWELL'S DEFENCE.

OUR SPECIAL WASHINGTON DEPATCHES.

Washington, Monday, June 30.

ENLARGING THE CANALS AND LOCKS.

The House devoted its entire session to-day, continuing for about three hours, to the discussion of the bill for the enlargement of the Erie and Oswego locks and the Illinois Canal and River. The expenditure of the United States is carefully limited by the bill to three and a half millions for the former work, and ten millions for the latter, which sum is to be expended gradually, and only as fast as the revenue is pledged to the United States shall suffice to pay the interest. The merits of the bill were discussed in able and effective speeches by Messrs. Francis Blair, of Missouri, Arnold, of Illinois, and Ely, Foster, Odin and Nat Bond, of New-York. The Pennsylvania delegation, and that of New-Jersey, and those of the Border States, opposed the bill en masse. Mr. Stevens, of Pennsylvania, the only speaker against the bill, endeavored to throw ridicule upon it by introducing a mock amendment for a slack water navigation of the Susquehanna for the passage of gunboats, followed by a motion to postpone the whole subject to the first Monday of January next. The previous question being demanded on the latter proposition, it was defeated by the close vote of 57 to 56. A series of filibustering movements were then made by the opponents of the bill to prevent further action upon it, and the Ayes and Noes were repeatedly taken. It is a very singular and unfortunate circumstance, that Hon. Francis A. Conklin, the only Republican Member from the City of New-York, steadily voted with the Opposition, in which he was constituted by his brother, Hon. Roscoe Conklin, who lives upon the line of the Erie Canal. With these exceptions, the whole delegation of the New-York Delegation present, including Messrs. Wood and Sam Wolfe, of New-York City, firmly supported the bill. It also received the votes of many of the substantial Members from New-England, and nearly all the Members from the Western States. The House at length adjourned, with the understanding that the final vote upon the measure should be taken in the morning.

THE TARIFF.

Owing to the debate on the canal enlargement bills, the tariff amendments were not considered by the House to-day. They will probably be disposed of to-morrow, although the day is set apart for the Naval Bill. The tariff amendments are much discussed. Representatives are flooded with letters of inquiry touching them from their constituents. It is believed that the bill will pass the Senate with but few amendments, and become a law at an early day.

Members of Congress are constantly receiving letters asking for copies of the Tax bill, but several days will elapse before they are printed.

As many questions are asked as to how appointments of collectors and assessors under the Tax bill will be made, from what can be learned it is understood the President will adopt the principle pursued in the case of Postmasters in the cities and large towns generally, but not in every instance, on the recommendation of members of Congress.

THE STEVENS BATTERY.

The Committee on Naval Affairs of this House will meet to-morrow, for the purpose of considering the propositions of Commodore Stevens for the completion of his battery. The Secretary of the Navy having declined to take any further action for its completion, Mr. Stevens comes forward with two propositions—one, to complete the battery at his own expense, and to have it used subject to the approval of the Secretary of Navy; the other, that Government take it off his hands as it is, by reimbursing him for money already expended.

A CORPS TO BE RAISED BY GEN. SHIELDS.

It is said that Gen. Shields is authorized to raise a corps of Irish soldiers for the service of the United States. It is supposed that if there was any probability of a war with England a body of 100,000 Irish could be raised.

GEN. M'DOWELL.

Gen. McDowell is preparing for publication a vindication of himself, in which he will prove that it was against his remonstrance that he was withdrawn in cooperation with Gen. McClellan, and that he desired to advance from Fredericksburgh to aid in the attack upon Richmond, and that it was not his fault he did not. He will also refer, it is stated, to the charge of guarding rebel property.

GEN. M'KINSTRY.

Gen. McKinstry is to have a trial as soon as the public service can spare the officers necessary to compose a Court.

ARMY CONTRACTS.

The report of Messrs. Hoar and Gwin, Commissioners on Army Contracts, was to-day communicated to Congress. It is quite brief, and will be published in two or three days. The Commissioners have performed laborious and disagreeable service, but have undoubtedly saved many millions of dollars to the Treasury. Their commission now expires.

POSTAGE ARRANGEMENTS.

It is directed by the Post-office Department that persons connected with the army engaged in the sale or distribution of newspapers or periodicals, must arrange for the payment of the postage on the same at the office where mailed, or at the office to which they are directed, other wise they will not be forwarded to the various points where the regiments are located. A large accumulation of such papers are now in the Washington City Post-office, which cannot be forwarded to the regiments to which they are addressed because of the non-payment of postage.

CONFIRMATIONS.

The Senate to-day confirmed the following appointments by the President: Hillsdon G. Whiting, Attorney for the Southern District of California; Wm. G. Campbell, of Tennessee, Brigadier-General; Isaac Newton, Commissioner of Agriculture; Wm. B. Tayler, Collector of the Customs for Bristol and Warren, R. I.; Surgeon Lewis Humphreys, Medical Inspector in the Army.

The following Assistant Surgeons were also confirmed: John S. Billings, Ohio; James Adams, Maryland; Edward S. Whittingham, New-Jersey; Phineas S. Conner, Ohio; Thomas S. McKeown, Maryland; William J. Worley, Kentucky; William H. Nelson, Pennsylvania; John D. Riley, Kentucky; Edward de W. Swanson, Pennsylvania; Jeremiah B. Brinton, Pennsylvania.

The following are among the additional Paymasters confirmed: Hoell K. Lawrence, Wilmington; Edward J. Porter, New-York; J. Howe Wolfe, New-Mexico; Ezra Weth, Ohio; Ace Hall, Jr., Alabama.

Besides the above appointments the Senate to-day confirmed a large number of Assistant Quartermasters, additional Paymasters, Commissaries of Subsistence, etc. Quite a number of Assistant Adjutant-Generals were also confirmed, principally with the rank of Captains.

C. W. Dorsey has been confirmed as Brigade Surgeon, and James G. Rivers, of Philadelphia, as Commissary of Subsistence, with the rank of Captain.

GEN. POPE'S STAFF.

The following appointments have also been made for Gen. Pope's staff: Dr. McVaitie, Medical Director; Maj. Robert E. McLane, Chief Quartermaster; Capt. Louis Marshall, of the Tenth Infantry of Regulars, Aid-de-Camp, with the rank of Colonel.

GEN. KING.

The statement in a Washington paper to-day that Gen. King declined to take command of Corps No. 1 of the Army of Virginia, is not correct. The whole matter turned upon a question of policy, upon which the Secretary of War, Gen. Pope and Gen. King were agreed, and the latter returned to his first

AN ADDRESS BY PARSON BROWNLOW.

Parson Brownlow addressed a large audience at Ford's Theatre this evening. He made a telling speech, interspersed in numerous hits and terrible denunciations of the rebels and their sympathizers. He was warmly cheered, and at the close of his remarks, he introduced to the crowd the Hon. HOMER MAYNARD, of Tennessee, who made a brief speech.

When Brownlow rose to speak, he was greeted with deafening cheers. In his preliminary remarks he said they were sure he was suffering from a diphtheric and laryngeal attack of bronchitis so as to be enable to be heard at any responsive distance to public audiences. Two years ago he presided in New-York, and spoke twelve nights under Professor HOLLAND. Great [illegible] Through the [illegible] he said they came, in spite of professions very [illegible] Shaking hands of Gazes, the latter shook him cordially by the hand, and advised him, as a cordial, to his disease, 50 dollars daily in the woods, having for his audience the birds of the air and beasts of the forest. This, however, did not prove sufficiently interesting. Being a member of a Temperance Society, he wished to labor was a good work, he made speeches on that subject, and, being a priest in the Church, preached brief sermons occasionally.

At this point Brownlow exclaimed to persons in the [illegible] "Gentlemen, come upon the stage. Here are seats for you. I will not contaminate your skirts with secession. Bring the ladies with you if they are on the side of the Union. (Laughter, and voice of "Good egg; go it Parson.") He continued: Don't introduce a secession woman, for a secession woman feels the more devilish than Mary Magdalene and. (Laughter and applause. The crowd, in the aisles mounted to the stage, among these several members of Congress.) As I was saying, I occasionally delivered short sermons. (A voice—"What church do you belong to?") The miserable Methodist Church South, that's going helterskelter (laughter and applause) but when I return, I intend to add my own church in East Tennessee. Everybody knows that I advocate the doctrines of the Bible, and of John Wesley, as well as to engage in the Temperance cause, in a good work, yet there [illegible] I recovered my voice. [A voice—"You have it now."] The Parson then proceeded to tell how he recovered his voice by making Union speeches.

OUR WASHINGTON CORRESPONDENCE.

FREMONT'S RETIREMENT—HUNTER AND BEAUREGARD UNDER A CLOUD—SERVICES OF JOSEPH HOLT.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Saturday Afternoon, June 28.

The abandonment of the military service by Maj.-Gen. John C. FREMONT, is the topic of to-day, but it does not appear to create any sensation. His friends say "the country will justify him;" but the general opinion is, that his course is unjustifiable and will be very damaging to his reputation. The language of the order of the War Department retiring Gen. FREMONT from service is peculiar, in that it recites the reasons assigned by that officer for declining to serve where the President desired him. He says the duty assigned him (under Gen. POPE) is of less importance than those he has heretofore filled; and that he cannot act in a subordinate capacity without a material loss of "rank and consideration" in the service. The War Department, in putting these excuses in Gen. FREMONT'S mouth, evidently intends that he shall bear the onus of his retirement.

Those who are disposed to be harsh on Gen. FREMONT contend that his resignation is unmilitary and unpatriotic. The President is Commander-in-Chief of the Army, and to accomplish a proposed result, he combines the forces of several Major Generals. To secure unity of counsel, he puts an officer of his own selection in command of the whole. That officer is the equal in rank and vastly the superior of Gen. FREMONT in military education, length of service, and achievements in the field. But whether this were so or not, the arrangement of the "Army of Virginia" is the President's own work, by virtue of his constitutional rank as Commander-in-Chief of the Army and Navy of the United States. However dissatisfied the position assigned Gen. FREMONT, it was assigned him by his President and superior, and should have been accepted. His refusal to serve is a reflection on the President, and to that extent insubordinate in spirit. But the worst effect on Gen. FREMONT'S reputation will be the grounds he has afforded his enemies for saying it is his own "rank and consideration" that he is fighting for, and not the safety of the Union—that it is FREMONT first, and if not himself first, then the country not at all.

It is understood that President LINCOLN promptly relieved Gen. FREMONT at his request, and made no effort to reconcile him to the new programme in the Shenandoah Valley. In explanation of this fact, I presume it is not improper for me to add, as a part of the unpublished history of the late campaign in pursuit of Jackson, that the War Department was not at all pleased with the official reports of Gen. FREMONT from the field. The beautiful chalice of a great victory at Cross Keys, when we were actually repulsed with terrible loss, imparted confidence in the candor of the Commanding General, and the fact that Gen. JACKSON, to six hours after the fight with FREMONT, was engaged in destroying the advance forces of Gen. BANKS, only a few miles distant, every gun being audible in Gen. FREMONT, proved two things to the satisfaction of our Government—first, that FREMONT had achieved no victory, second, that JACKSON had suffered no defeat.

Gen. KING, who succeeds Gen. FREMONT, is a New-Yorker, but a resident of Wisconsin, having been for many years editor of the Sentinel, at Milwaukee. He received a military education at West Point, was appointed by the President Minister to Rome, but declined the office in order to take a subordinate position in his country's defence. He is a skillful soldier and a very popular gentleman.

The Rebels of the National forces near Charleston give great concern in Washington. The ingratitude of that city should have had no further humiliation of the oldering to glost over. Enough is not known yet to enable the country to decide, with whom the blame rests; but I can assure you of two facts: that the best judgment of our military leaders never have thought Gen. HUNTER equal to the command of any military department, and Gen. BEAUREGARD is regarded as altogether too rash, too exclusive, too lacking in ballast, and too eager for distinction, to make it safe to put large bodies of men in his hands.

YOUNG, of course, done speculating about the cause of the President's visit to West Point. The order fortifying the armies in the Shenandoah Valley is, no doubt, the full explanation of that visit. It was a serious military difficulty how to get clear of the five Major-Generals robustly in the field pursuing JACKSON. The golden knot is cut, to the great delight of the country, Gen. FREMONT being the only dissentient, so far as we have heard.

The Commission on Gun Contracts, so long in session at Washington, is about through with their labors, and the Senate has called for their report. When the work of the Commission is published, it will be seen that Hon. JOHN HOUK has won a new claim on the gratitude of the nation by his patient and practical dealing with the mountain of corruption that had overwhelmed the War Department with rotten contracts last Winter. The Commission had no legal existence. It was merely an advisory Board, instituted by Secretary STANTON, to adjust amicably between contractors and the Government, the inordinate orders for arms issued under Secretary CAMERON. So successful have Messrs. HOUK and OWEN been that contracts for 1,100,000 muskets have been reduced to about 850,000; and prices for the guns that are to be made for the Government will be in many cases largely reduced. The saving effected to the Government

IMPORTANT FROM THE MISSISSIPPI.

Communication Established between the Fleets Above and Below Vicksburgh.

Van Dorn in Command of the Rebels There.

THE ATTACK PROBABLY COMMENCED.

CAIRO, Sunday, June 29.

The steamer Forest Queen, from Memphis, has arrived, with 850 bales of cotton.

News from the flotilla is highly interesting.

Our gunboats and rams have passed the mouth of the Yazoo River, and proceeded to within four miles of Vicksburgh, from which point seven men went by land, to the Louisiana side, and communicated with FARRAGUT'S fleet. Commodore FARRAGUT has since sent a dispatch to Capt. DAVIS, which reached Memphis on Saturday morning. Capt. DAVIS immediately started down the river with the Benton, and others of the flotilla will soon follow.

MEMPHIS, Saturday, June 28.

The Avalanche has been notified by the Provost-Marshal that an editorial published yesterday is exceedingly objectionable, and that criticism on the course of military officials cannot be allowed, and is warned not to repeat the offence.

The Grenada Appeal of the 23d learns that the National fleet, to the number of twenty gunboats and mortars, opened fire at an early hour that morning, on the lower batteries at Vicksburgh. The result is not stated. VAN DORN is in command there, having superseded LOVELL in the command of that Department.

A letter to the same paper from Chattanooga, the 16th, says: "We have direct news this morning that the enemy are falling back before our advancing columns from Powell's Valley to Big Creek Gap. While this is going on, MITCHEL is moving on our rear in the vicinity of Battle Creek, waiting to fall upon the prey."

The Grenada Appeal of the 25th says: "Gen. VAN DORN advises all families in Vicksburgh to move eight miles back from the river. He intends to defend that Department to the last extremity."

That paper also says that on Saturday last the Federal mortar fleet, in tow of tugboats from below, was repulsed at Grand Gulf by our batteries of 8-pounders and 12-pounders. The same day the gunboats at Vicksburgh opened a brisk fire on the batteries, which continued over an hour without detail any injury.

Of affairs in Arkansas, the Appeal says that "the rapid movements of Gen. HINDMAN'S forces have almost rid the State of CURTIS' army, and that they have succeeded in driving him back to a position within a short distance of the Missouri line. When our informant left, they were still retreating."

At an election in this city on Thursday, John PAGE, the Union candidate, received 724 votes being all that were cast.

Gen. Fremont's Retirement from the Army of the Shenandoah.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

The action of Gen. FREMONT, in asking to be relieved from his command, has attracted here, as doubtless elsewhere, the unfavorable criticism of his opponents, and in many cases excited the anxiety of his friends.

As one of the latter, I was at first surprised and grieved, that after doing so nobly in the valley, after driving the superior force of the rebel JACKSON from his vicinity, and giving such gallant service to his country, he should, in a moment of pique refuse virtually to serve under the newly appointed chief.

That I was wrong in the following facts convinced me, and that they may do the same office for others, I am unmitigated, I respectfully ask their insertion.

First—Gen. FREMONT is a Major-General of the regular army. While in command of the Western Department, Brig.-Gen. POPE served under him in command of a brigade. The latter's course, in delaying to bring rapidly forward his troops, annoyed Gen. FREMONT, and interfered with the carrying out of certain plans, thereby subjecting Gen. POPE to the displeasure of his superior.

Without concealment, Gen. POPE manifested his dislike of FREMONT, his disapproval of his progressive views, and his policy generally, and when it was announced that Gen. HUNTER was to succeed him, he, in the presence of several officers, clapped his hands, and indulged his gratification at the fact.

Secondly—Gen. FREMONT has had but about 9,000 effective men. He was sent to the Mountain Department at a time when but little was doing there. Very shortly after he assumed command, matters grew thicker, and work became warmer. Gen. BANKS was compelled to retreat, and Gen. FREMONT was ordered to pursue JACKSON. That he did it, and how he did it, are matters of record. The failure on the part of Gen. SCHENCK to burn the bridge across which JACKSON, in his retreat, was to pass saved that lucky rebel, and defeated FREMONT'S further victory. With JACKSON'S reinforced army threatening him, with his supplies far in his rear, with Gen. SHIELDS' force ordered to Richmond by the President, with BANKS and STOUT, where they could, by no possibility, aid him, and with his own little army in need of rest, he retreated. The President telegraphed him to pursue JACKSON no further, but to make a stand at Harrisonburgh, which was on no line of defence, and hold it. Gen. FREMONT, in the meantime, seeing the absurdity of three small commands like his own and those of BANKS and STOUT standing separate, concerted with the views of BANKS and STOUT and fall back to Mount Jackson where a junction was effected. A movement which was previously suggested by him to the President.

As senior officer by military law, Gen. FREMONT was then in command of the entire corps; but Mr. STANTON telegraphed him expressly that with the other commands he was to have nothing to do. Gen. STOUT insisted upon considering himself under FREMONT, and Gen. BANKS told his officers, in council assembled, that in case of a battle they were to consider themselves as responsible to the senior Major-General.

Gen. FREMONT telegraphed the President that his men needed rest; that the Surgeon-General of his command reported officially that his men must have better diet; that he had taken a fair position; that his men were doing well, and that by the end of ten days he would have gathered in from all quarters his resources, and that the number of effective men would be 20,000—well supplied with artillery and ready for any work.

Upon this came the order placing Gen. POPE—a junior officer, a Pro-Slavery man, a personal enemy, a rebuked subordinate—over him, over Maj.-Gen. BANKS and over Maj.-Gen. STOUT.

Gen. FREMONT could with no self-respect remain at his post. Had he done so, what warrant had he for supposing that to be his last official degradation? With the unanimous concurrence of his officers, of Gens. BANKS and STOUT, he asked to be relieved, and asked it in such terms that the President saw it to grant it.

The President has within a few days expressed himself most strongly and warmly in Gen. FREMONT'S praise, while on the other hand, it is stated that he as warmly condemned him. With the latter report I have nothing to do; because I know nothing of it—of the former I am well assured.

In fact, the only point at issue between him and Gen. FREMONT was that the President at a distance of several hundred miles, directed the relief of BANKS by a prescribed route, which FREMONT, judging to be an impracticable one, took the responsibility of altering.

The President telegraphed him, saying, "You are ordered to go so and so. I hear of you elsewhere." What does this mean? To which Gen. FREMONT replied, giving the reasons, viz., that he knew of a shorter and easier route by which he could more effectually perform the service desired, and on which to his half-famished troops would meet their transportation and supplies. He also stated that when one is "in the field" it is essentially difficult to obey literally orders transmitted from one necessarily unaware of present exigencies, but that if it was expected of him so to do, he would do it. To this the President, with characteristic simplicity and frankness, replied that he was satisfied.

This seems to be the whole story.

Over Major-Gen. FREMONT is placed a former subordinate, an inferior in rank, an unconcealed enemy, a Pro-Slavery man—and that, too, as an administrative recognition of the services done in the Valley. Of course FREMONT simply requested that he might be [illegible] Washington, Monday, June 23, 1862.

AFFAIRS BEFORE RICHMOND.

[illegible] from their rifle pits, and repeating that they had secured and held what is known as Turkey Hill, an important position, commanding the City of Richmond. This is the "important point" alluded to in the despatches of Gen. McCLELLAN detailing the assault. The dead left on our side was reported to be about two hundred and twenty, wounded and sixty killed. A large number of these wounded were, however, very slight, most of them being able to walk from the care to the hospital boat. Thus ended the events of Wednesday.

BOMBS ON THURSDAY.

The fact that the gunboats had taken position in front of the landing, with their guns out and shotted, and the sweeping away of the trees, which was still progressing, gave renewed activity to the rush of the camp followers for passes by the mail boat to Fortress Monroe, and our population commenced to be rapidly depleted.

The down trains from the front reported all quiet, with the exception of certain mysterious movements within our lines that were not understandable to civilians. The immense stock of stores and forage at Dispatch Station, eleven miles from White House, were being carried off with great rapidity, and subsequently we learned that an immense train of wagons had been running from that point all day, with forage and stores, and that the greatest activity in their removal was being observed. In the evening it was announced that not a bale of hay, a bushel of oats, a barrel of beef, or a box of crackers, was left.

Throughout the day of White House the greatest activity was observed in and around the headquarters of Gen. CASEY, who had pitched his tents on the beautiful lawn in front of the White House, the building itself being occupied as the private quarters of the Sisters of Charity—and here let me add that it is quite a small building, having not more than six small rooms in it, the outbuildings and servant's quarters being occupied as the abode of the use of by these ministering angels of the sick and wounded soldier. An immense train of wagons was also moving forward from the Subsistence and Commissary Departments throughout the day, and the immense stocks on shore were being rapidly diminished. The trains on the railroad were still steadily moving forward with ammunition, and continued throughout the night. Cavalry scouts had also been sent out in various directions during the day, and preparations were made for obstructing the roads.

At dusk a new panic was occasioned by the discovery that the bales of hay had been piled over and night, all the large masses of subsistence stores on the landing, indicating the probability that it might become necessary during the night to apply the torch to them to prevent their falling into the hands of the enemy.

Whilst all these preparations were going on, indicating the probable intention of evacuating the landing on shore, the numerous steamers and tugs, probably fifty in number, had been busy towing down the river to West Point, a distance of fifty miles, through its tortuous windings, long lines of brigs and barks laden with stores. The vessels that were scattered about in the vicinity were also collected together in separate groups and anchored in the stream, where they could be easily and rapidly taken in tow by the steamers when the time for their removal arrived. And in order that the reader may imagine the scene here presented, it may be proper for him to understand that no less than seven hundred sail of vessels were, two days previous, at anchor at the White House and landing and stream along for eight or ten miles down the river.

In the meantime the work on the construction of the railroad bridge over the Pamunkey, just above the landing, was steadily progressing, a large force of workmen being constantly at work. This fact, in conjunction with the evident movement toward a speedy evacuation, bewildered the speculations of the natives, but Col. INGALLS, under whose directions the evacuation was progressing, moved about as coolly as a Summer's morning.

The morning train brought down the gratifying news that the forward movements of Gen. HOOKER had been entirely successful, and that he held the enemy's camp and rifle-pits. About one hundred more of the wounded arrived, and were removed, with the others, to the hospital steamers, where the Sanitary Committee, with their large corps of Surgeons, and the numerous Sisters of Charity in attendance, done all in their power to render the poor fellows comfortable. There are also a large number of volunteer female nurses in attendance, who are unremitting in their attention and kindness to the sick and wounded.

The reports from the front on Thursday evening continued favorable, heavy skirmishing having taken place on the right, resulting in the repulse of the enemy, and a few more of the wounded arrived, who reported everything progressing most satisfactorily, whilst all the indications were that a general battle along the whole line would take place next day (Friday.) The trains were kept in motion all night, carrying forward munitions of war, whilst the wagon-trains were still lining the roads with commissary stores.

THE GREAT ALARM.

On Friday morning the first item of news from the front received by telegraph was a gratifying announcement that Stonewall JACKSON and EWELL, in attempting to turn the right flank, were repulsed by Gen. McCALL with his Pennsylvania Reserves, and driven back with great slaughter. This attempt of JACKSON was made at 3 o'clock in the morning, and had closed at 6 o'clock, with a signal victory. This repulse is said to have been one of the most decisive and destructive of the war, the enemy being put in a complete rout, with very light loss to our forces. Although at night, and intended for a surprise, the gallant Pennsylvanians were found to be wide awake. There was, however, every indication of a general battle along the whole line, and Gen. McCLELLAN, in order to be ready for all emergencies, gave directions to Gen. CASEY and Col. INGALLS to make every preparation for the instant removal or destruction of all the supplies at White House, should the result of the impending battle render such a course necessary, his force being deemed too small to render the successful defence of his position a certainty against such a movement of the enemy as might ensue.

The steamers and tugs were all in early requisition, and were moving down the river with long trains of transports in tow. The vessels nearest the landing were also stored full of commissary stores and munitions, and moved out in the stream. The immense piles of boxes of crackers, barrels of pork, and other stores along the landing, were again covered over with bales of hay, so as to be ready at a moment's notice to apply the torch for their destruction if it should become necessary.

There was great commotion among the crowds of contrabands, who have been found most efficient laborers, and who have become attached to great favorites in the commissary and quartermaster departments. They soon understood that danger was apprehended, and on being assured by Col. INGALLS that they would not be left behind to meet the vengeance of their masters, went to work with renewed energy. Stores and munitions everywhere disappeared from the landings with great rapidity, and were being packed on the wharf boats and gunboats contiguous. The wives and children of the contrabands also soon made their appearance, and with bundles and babies, took position on the canal-boats as they were floated out in the stream.

The mail steamer, which should have left for Fortress Monroe at 7 o'clock in the morning, was ordered to be detained, and at 9 o'clock a dispatch was received that a general battle was progressing along the whole line, the enemy having renewed the attempt to flank Gen Porter's position on the right wing. At 11 o'clock a second dispatch announced that Gen. Porter had driven the enemy before him and repulsed them three times with terrific slaughter, and was then ordered by Gen. McCLELLAN to fall back. This dispatch was a signal for renewed energy in the work of evacuation, and all the Quartermasters' papers and valuables, and the chests of the Paymasters were brought on board the mail boat. The family of Quartermaster EMORY was also brought on board, with his horses and carriage, and the horses of Assistant-Quartermaster SAWYER. The household furniture and the servants of these officials also soon followed, which increased the excitement among the sutlers and army followers. Some of the sutlers became so panic-stricken as to sell out their stocks at half-price and hastened on board the boat, whilst some determined to hold on and take the chances. That there was an intention on the part of Gen. McCLELLAN to evacuate the White House as soon as his movements in front should be perfected there was no doubt, but whether as a necessity or a strategetic movement could not at that time be foreseen.

THE PANIC CHECKED.

During the afternoon the panic increased until 3½ o'clock, and the steamers and tugs were busily engaged in towing down the transports. At 3 o'clock a dispatch was received from headquarters, in substance as follows:

"We have been driving the enemy before us on the left wing for the past half hour. Cheers are heard all along the lines."

This was the signal for a new change in the programme. All the Government valuables and the property of the officers was taken off of the mail-boat and placed on board the steamer Comanche, and the order given for the departure of the mail-boat, which left at 3 o'clock for Fortress Monroe, taking with her in tow two heavily laden steamers, with directions for them to be dropped at West Point.

Two of the large hospital steamers filled with sick and wounded also left about the same time, and moved majestically down the river. The steamer Commodore was still left at the wharf to receive any new arrivals from the battle-field, and the Daniel Webster and the Rip City, devoted to the same service, soon after arrived. It was also announced that Gen. STONEMAN, with 8,000 cavalry and artillery, was within six miles of the White House to protect the work of evacuation if a dash should be made by the enemy in that direction.

SCENE ON THE RIVER.

The scene presented on the river was a most interesting one. Ten miles below the White House about 200 brigs, barks and schooners were at anchor, with any quantity of canal-boats loaded with implements of war, commissary and subsistence stores. On the whole route down steamers and tugs were passed, having large numbers of vessels in tow, and at West Point, 40 miles below the White House, not less than 500 vessels were at anchor, while the numerous steamers and tugs which had brought them down were preparing to start up for the several hundred miles up the river.

STATEMENTS OF THE WOUNDED.

About 7 o'clock, on Friday evening, numbers of the wounded commenced to arrive from the front of the army, with a few of the most intelligent of whom I had an opportunity of conversing. Some of these [illegible] do be most quick and decisive. We came down on them expecting to drive them before us, but they all unanimously expecting his approach, had taken up and formed by Gen. McCLELLAN two days previous that he was coming upon them. Instead of a flank the enemy received the first shock and after hard fighting retreated in confusion.

The wounded from the front, which immediately ensued, represented it to have been a most terrific encounter, the enemy coming out from Richmond upon them in such close masses that the shell and grape poured into them as they advanced, made great gaps in their lines, which were immediately filled up, and they moved forward most determinedly. Their artillery was so poorly served that the damage to our ranks was light in proportion. They still moved on and exchanged showers of minie-balls which were destructive on both sides, but when Gen. Pearce ordered a bayonet charge, they retreated in double-quick, though Gen. Pearce pursued them but a short distance.

The enemy again rallied and approached our lines a second time, when the same terrible slaughter ensued, this time their artillery, being better served, was more effective in the ranks of our men. On coming to close quarters they were again repulsed, and driven back a still greater distance, this twice fought over battle-ground being literally strewn with the dead and dying. Gen. Pearce then a second time fell back to his position and waited nearly an hour for the enemy to renew the assault. They, however, finally came on in increased numbers, having been largely reinforced, and were again received with shell and grape, causing great chasms in their ranks, and one poor fellow who had lost his arm assured me that he saw the loose arms and portions of the bodies of the enemy making gyrations through the air. A third time the enemy bore down most bravely and determinedly on our lines, and this conflict was the most severely contested of the whole, but when the bayonet was brought to bear he fell back, and was pressed toward Richmond fully a mile beyond our original lines.

Again, for the fourth time, Gen. Pearce fell back to his first position, when an order was received from Gen. McCLELLAN to continue his retrograde movement slowly and in order. So soon as it became apparent to the enemy that it was the purpose of Gen. Pearce to retire, the enemy again pushed forward most boldly and bravely, when their advance was checked by the entire reserve force, consisting of the New-York Fifth, Lieut.-Col. DURYEA, the New-York Tenth, Col. BURNIE, and two other regiments, under command of Col. WARREN, Acting Brigadier-General, and the entire force of regulars under Maj. Gen. SYKES. This fresh force held the enemy in check whilst the force which had previously borne the brunt of the battle moved steadily back and in good order, carrying with them their wounded and dead.

The enemy made a fierce attack on the reserve, but cannon were posted at various points of the route by which they were retiring towards the Chickahominy, which occasionally poured in shot and shell upon them, and checked their movements and enabled the troops to move back in the most admirable order. At one time in this retrograde movement the reserve force of Gen. SYKES charged on the enemy with the bayonet and drove him back nearly a mile. In this charge the gallant New-York Fifth and Col. BURNIE's New-York Tenth drew forth the plaudits of the army by their steadiness and bravery, in which they, however, lost about a hundred of their numbers, whose bodies it was necessary to leave on the field. Cheers went up along our whole lines at this gallant repulse, which was at 5 o'clock in the afternoon, and the enemy did not again renew the attack during the balance of the evening, but turned his columns down toward the White House, which seemed to be the haven of all his hopes. The division of the enemy dispatched in this direction was estimated at from twenty to thirty thousand, cavalry, artillery and infantry. They started down at 3 o'clock on Friday afternoon.

STATEMENT OF A PAYMASTER.

In conversation with a Paymaster, who was with Gen. PORTER's Division when the battle commenced, I have a very full confirmation of the statement of this gallant soldier. He says that being anxious for the large amount of treasure in his possession, he asked instructions, and was told to proceed on to Savage Station, on the Richmond side of the Chickahominy, in company with the wagon train then moving in that direction with the knapsacks of the men and all the valuables from the various camps of the division. He joined the train and moved on, and describes the artillery reserves stationed along the road to protect the retiring of the right wing of the army across the Chickahominy. He says it was a most orderly movement, conducted slowly and steadily, and that the only evidence of panic was among some teamsters, who threatened to break their lines, but were instantly checked by a company of cavalry who drew on them and were ordered to blow out the brains of the first man who deserted his post or disobeyed the orders of the guards.

The gentleman left the Savage Station, south of the Chickahominy, at 7 o'clock on Saturday morning, and states that during the night the entire right wing of the army passed over the river in perfect order, not losing a wagon of the train, and only leaving such portion of their camps as was not deemed worth removing, as they retired to their new lines. There had been no firing through the night, though at five o'clock on Saturday morning some heavy cannonading was in progress on the extreme left, toward the James River, which soon ceased, however, and at 7 o'clock all was again quiet. The railroad was in operation all night on Friday, after the battle, and the last train that left for the White House took its departure at 7 o'clock, and met no interruption on the way down.

LAST OF THE WHITE HOUSE.

On Saturday morning the work of evacuation at the White House had been nearly completed, and although there was still a number of vessels before the landing, there was an abundance of steamers in readiness to move off with them at any moment.

At 9 o'clock a train of cars started out for headquarters, but had not been gone more than an hour before it returned, reporting the enemy to be approaching Dispatch Station, which is eleven miles from the White House. This, however, is supposed to be a mistake, as telegraphic communication through to Gen. McCLELLAN was continued up to 11 o'clock, at which time the mail-boat started for Fortress Monroe.

MY CONCLUSIONS.

From the foregoing, I think I have conclusively proven that the object of Gen. McCLELLAN, long before the battle on Friday, was to abandon the White House, and also draw in his right wing across the Chickahominy. That he has accomplished this most masterly movement with but little loss, is owing, next with his punishment of the enemy, there can be no doubt, and though he has strengthened the City of Richmond by concentrating his forces around it, he can well afford to bide his time. Richmond is in a measure self-sustaining. There he will have the cooperation of the gunboats, and if the enemy attempt to interrupt his supply vessels by making a dash on the James River, they will meet with prompt punishment from the gunboats, and so weaken their forces in front that the city will fall into his possession with but a slight struggle. Although "hope may be father to the thought," I would wager a big apple that Gen. McCLELLAN is in possession of Richmond by Sunday next.

FURTHER PARTICULARS.

WASHINGTON, Sunday, June 29, 1862.

Since closing my letter from the White House I find myself very unexpectedly in Washington City, and in possession of most reliable information from the White House and other points on the Peninsula, nearly a day later than are contained in my letter.

END OF THE WHITE HOUSE.

It appears that the telegraphic communication between the White House and Gen. McCLELLAN was not broken until near one o'clock on Saturday, and then the wire was cut at Dispatch Station, eleven miles out. Tunstall's Station, four miles on, was in our possession until four o'clock in the afternoon, at which hour the operator at White House heard a strange signal coming over the wire. On going to the instrument he was heralded with what the Federal soldiers call the rebel National salute—"I say, O you Yankee —— of ——." This was the signal given for the final evacuation, when a portion of the infantry forces immediately embarked on steamboats in waiting for them, the last of the transports was moved off or the steamtugs, and the few articles scattered about on shore—even some damaged hay—were fired. The whole was of very small value, and thus of the many millions of property here a few days ago, perhaps not $5,000 worth was destroyed.

In the midst of the closing scene of the beautiful Chickahominy region I regret to have to state that some vandal set fire to the White House, and it was entirely consumed. This doubtless arose from the ridiculous teachings of a recent grave Senatorial debate on this little cottage.

The enemy made his appearance in considerable force at the White House about 7 o'clock on Saturday evening, and although he found neither bread for man, or hay for beasts, was welcomed with heavy showers of grape-shot from the three gunboats which were ranged along in front of the landing. They were supposed to be thirty thousand strong, and unless they brought their haversacks well supplied must have gone supperless to bed. In the best of times I found starvation to stare me in the face at White House, and I hope the rebels found no better fare.

RETIREMENT OF THE TROOPS.

The cavalry at the White House guarded the departure of the last of the wagons and horses which moved off at the final evacuation, and joined the force under Gen. STONEMAN who were hovering around the vicinity all day. After passing these trains off and securing their safety, Gen. STONEMAN with his entire force moved off in a direction that I am not at liberty at present to state.

Gen. CASEY reports that he lost not a man, nor did he leave a soul behind, nor even a contraband.

THE TRANSPORTS.

At 10 o'clock on Sunday morning, Col. INGALLS and Capt. SAWYERS were before Yorktown with an immense convoy of vessels and steamers, on their way to the new base of operations on the James River. They would doubtless move down immediately to Fortress Monroe, and await the instructions of Gen. McCLELLAN. A large number, are, however, already up the James River, under the protection of the gunboats.
